Chicago based Video One Productions (VOP) would like to invite local clients to make use of the company's industry-leading video production capabilities. The company offers video production, editing, disc duplication and multimedia services throughout the greater Chicago area. Their assistance has been sought by a wide variety of clients, from businesses and government agencies to non-profits and individuals, who all use the company's expertise and artistic talent to achieve their goals through this medium.

For the past three decades, Video One Production has been working with their talented staff to help realize the creative visions of their clients. The company offers professional video services at affordable prices. "When Video One first started, our sole focus was video production," says the company. "In response to our clients' requests for other, related services, we expanded our repertoire of multimedia offerings. Saying yes to accommodate our clients' needs helped Video One become the complete service video production company that we are today."

The company produces, edits and markets a large variety of business-class videos for many entities, including corporations, government agencies, the arts and much more. Whether one needs assistance with one or more aspects of their media, the production experts at Video One Productions can help create a unique and effective video to convey the intended message. The experts at VOP write scripts, help with lighting and do everything they can to help their clients create the perfect video. Their marketing services include video distribution, video SEO, video performance analysis and more.

The company is run by President and Producer Irwin Myers, an award winning producer with more than 25 years in the video production industry. He has a great deal of experience with shooting, editing, duplicating and many other facets of the field. He oversees marketing, sales, production and other aspects of the business' day to day operations.

In 1987, current president Irwin Myers was the Director of the Credit Counseling Center—a government agency that helped Chicago residents with their money management problems,— says Video One Productions. Wanting to reach more people with his agency's consumer education workshops, he learned video production and produced three, 30-minute videos that were viewed by thousands of people on cable TV. One day, Irwin met his wife's boss, who upon learning that he did videography, asked him to produce several videos for his association management company. Wanting to enter the private sector, Irwin said yes, and Video One started that day! Since then, Video One Productions has evolved into one of Chicago's premier video production companies.

The company's services have been incredibly well received by many of their clients, with a number of them leaving excellent reviews of the work done by VOP. One 5-Star review from the US army states, "Video One Productions far exceeded our production quality expectations in the training video they produced for us and the US Army. After we completed our construction project, Video One was able to shoot all the HD footage in a single day, dealing with difficult conditions (inside underground utility facilities with loud equipment), and delivered the finished DVD within a week."

Another 5-Star Yelp review from a client named Perry, states, "I had Video One create a point of sale video for my company. I dealt with Irwin, who was very helpful and creative in offering ideas to present the products in a way that I did not think of. The process was good, and the product was amazing. I was shocked as to the professional feel and look of the end product, given the price. I thought I would have spent tens of thousands for the kind of video product that I received. Very happy with them and would use them again in the future!"

Those looking for highly reliable Chicago video production can find exactly what they are looking for at Video One Productions. The company has been offering high quality production services to clients in the area for several years and is guaranteed to produce the most creative, unique, well-marketed and effective videos.
