August 17, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

The National Center for American Indian Enterprise Development (NCAIED) recently announced the Native Edge is now open for business. An all-inclusive system comprising of many power-packed modules, the Native Edge is a 24/7 online portal whose software was developed by CCS after working extensively with NCAIED to bring the concept to life. The Native Edge can be viewed at www.nativeedge.com.

Comprising of four key areas, Native Edge allows Native American professionals to expand their trade, explore business and work opportunities, communicate with other Native American entrepreneurs and offer their products and services to Fortune 500 companies nationally and internationally, as well as the federal government.

The Hire Edge allows corporate procurement hiring managers to meet their diversity goals by hiring talented American Indian job seekers with varied portfolios. It also allows Tribes, small businesses and corporations to list internship opportunities easily accessible to Native American students and fresh graduates.

The ?N2N? Edge Community is designed for all Indian Country members to interactively network online, through powerful in-built features including the Native Edge Member Groups, an extensive business directory, member timeline and live status updates and more!

The Training Edge allows Native American business owners and their staffs to enhance their professional learning through an extensive video training library with wide-ranging videos on business acumen, management training, skills training and more.

The Procurement Edge, perhaps one of the most exciting modules in the Native Edge portal, is a tool for Native American businesses and tribes to access both federal and corporate procurement opportunities, and a platform for these businesses to partner with each other for potential joint ventures.

Ben Fatola, CEO of Cloud Custom Solutions, who has worked with major entities like Microsoft, City of Phoenix and WBEC-WEST stated that, "The Native Edge comprises of many modules and unique built-in features that are specially designed to serve the needs of the Native American community. We are confident that the Native Edge will be a very successful tool for NCAIED to use in helping Native Americans grow their business, find jobs and interact with each other and with major corporations."

Gary Davis, President and CEO of the National Center said: "For over a decade, the Native Edge was merely a concept and a dream in Indian Country. With the help, dedication, and expertise of CCS over the last six months, it is now a reality and growing at a rapid pace. We look forward to working with CCS to ensure the Native Edge continues to open up business opportunities for Native Americans ? from Alaska to Florida."
