March 18, 2020 -
Jasper, Georgia kitchen cabinets can help make a remodeling project not such a scary endeavor. As with any home improvement project taking on too much at once is overwhelming. Break the kitchen remodeling project down into manageable steps to succeed.

Here, kitchen cabinets Jasper retailer BarrWood Cabinets breaks down a kitchen remodeling project into six steps. Follow these steps to plan any kitchen remodeling project. When it is time to start remodeling a kitchen, create a detailed task schedule based on these six steps. Remember to go step-by-step, including every detail from start to finish in the task schedule.

Step one is to create a kitchen design, ?lookbook." As you begin a kitchen remodel, the first hurdle is knowing where to start. Whether new to remodeling or an old pro, start by creating a lookbook. A lookbook can be physical a collection of photos, swatches, colors, and textures, or a group of digital pins on a Pinterest board. To build a lookbook, study design resources on and offline.

Combine anything that catches the eye to the collection. Find design inspiration everywhere to create the lookbook, add the colors, materials, textures, and patterns that draw attention. These are the elements that to incorporate into the kitchen design.

Step two is to identify problems with the current kitchen. List the kitchen problems to be solved with the kitchen remodeling project. It is knowing what to change sets the agenda for the whole project.

A kitchen modeling project with specific problems to solve has a clear direction. Take each problem one by one and arrive at a way to address each issue. Give the list of the problems to three contractors for estimates for the job.

Step three is to designate each design idea in the lookbook as a ?Need? or a ?Want.? Needs are things the kitchen cannot function without and must have. Wants are items that would be nice to have. Knowing the difference will help when it is time to ascertain what is possible, budget-wise.

Step Four is selecting new cabinetry, cabinet hardware, countertops, sinks, and fixtures in person. It is necessary to see, touch, and feel options to decide what to install. Visit a quality kitchen and bath cabinet showroom to see loads of alternatives in one place. Bring swatches and sample materials to the showroom. Moreover, observe all colors and selections in the new kitchen lighting before purchasing.

Once there is a solid idea of the goals for the kitchen remodeling project, it is time to go to step five. Get quotes for the job from three reputable contractors. Contractors usually offer free detailed written estimates or quotes. Ask each contractor to include the cost for materials, labor, and the total project to compare the quotes apples-to-apples.

Consider that most minor kitchen remodels costs about $10,000 to $15,000, including new paint, new faucet, refaced cabinets, and a new backsplash. While major kitchen remodels with custom cabinets, granite countertops, luxury appliances, and hardwood floors run $30,000 and up.

Step six is the start of construction. It is essential to deal with a trustworthy contractor during the kitchen remodeling process. The contractor will have a project schedule to follow but prepare for the unexpected. Problems and delays are part of every remodeling project.

During the process of remodeling, be kind to the contractor and the construction crew. Keep communication lines open and follow progress carefully. Choosing a top-reviewed contractor usually eliminates problems in the first place. But miscommunications happen. Speak up if something seems amiss. Although mind-changing during a remodel costs time and money, it is usually for the best.
