TNL Educates Customers On The Effect Coronavirus Has On Wall Street

March 02, 2020 -
The Net Lender, a California based financial aid provider, would like to educate their customers on Wall Street and how the 2019/2020 Coronavirus outbreak has affected it. According to the New York Times, Wall Street is finally waking up to the damage the virus could do to the economy, and the financial world as a whole is beginning to see how the current situation differs from other, recent economic crises. The past few weeks have seen experts trying to predict how the virus might affect financial markets and the world economy in general. Supply chain managers, travel industry experts and employers have been warned of the potential for substantial disruptions to their businesses, with public health authorities saying that the disease could affect the whole world?not only Wuhan is in danger. Financial markets and most economic forecasters did not, however, predict that the virus would affect the economy and corporate profits beyond the ability of the Federal Reserve to fix via interest rate cuts.

This week, reports of outbreaks in South Korea and Italy have led to major markets taking a less optimistic view of the situation and its potential ramifications. There is a great deal of uncertainty regarding how widely the virus will spread and how much damage it might do. Patrick Chovanec, an adviser for Silvercrest Asset Management and an expert on the Chinese economy had this to say about the outbreak: ?It?s one thing if Wuhan is on lockdown, another if all of China is on lockdown, another if all of Asia is on lockdown and another if the whole world is on lockdown. That?s why sentiment has shifted?because it?s very different to have one country on lockdown for a couple of weeks versus rolling lockdowns throughout the global economy.?

With the world economy at serious risk due to the virus, it may be wise to have multiple sources of quick cash ready in case one finds themselves in need of financial aid. The Net Lender exists to provide this exact service. Anyone with a car title can apply for financial aid from TNL, using their car title as collateral. This means that, even with very bad credit (the possibility of having bad credit sometime in the future being very real with how unpredictable the economy is at the best of times), one can get in touch with TNL and apply for financial aid. The Net Lender uses nothing but the client?s car?s value to determine the amount of cash they can receive, and anyone who finds themselves in need of cash can make great use of the service. More information on who qualifies for financial aid from TNL can be found at https://www.thenetlender.com/who-can-get-a-car-title-loan/.

Emergencies, accidents and generally bad events are a part of life for everyone and when, hit by such events, banks are not always able and willing to help as financial aid providers like TNL. Urgent problems also tend to require quick solutions, and banks are always considerably slower given the large number of checks and balances they have set up. TNL can analyze an application in less than 15 minutes, and their clients can walk away with cash in hand within a much shorter space of time than with a bank.

?I am the head of the household and I know of the pressure one can get from bills and discrepancies in their credit,? says a review of the financial aid service. ?I used the car I bought before I got married, and it turned out to be such a lifesaver for me. I took out about half of what I was offered and wasn?t pressured any further. Thank you, and hopefully my car will be eligible again if need be.?

Another pleased client shares that, ?I came in directly after my work shift and was worried, due to the time restraints, that I wouldn?t get my application processed in time. Everything went smoothly and quickly but, most importantly, efficiently. Very friendly staff. I would recommend TNL for any person who needs money quickly.?
