

Tax Auction Investors Hosts Houston Real Estate Investing Event

March 02, 2020

March 02, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Tax Auction Investors, an Upland, CA based real estate investing company, is pleased to announce that they will be participating in an upcoming "real estate wealth experience" in Houston. The Legacy Revolution event will offer those interested in entering the real estate industry (as well as those who are already part of it and looking to learn more) the opportunity to get hands-on training with some of the biggest names in the industry.

The founding partners of Tax Auction Investors, along with the principals of RAD Diversified, will dissect every inch of the Tax Auction world and reveal the step-by-step strategy they have used to complete over $30,000,000 in real estate deals. The event is set to be a unique, worthwhile learning experience for all involved.

At the event, Tax Auction Investors will be raffling one of their free and clear properties, valued at $80,000 and which currently rents for $850 per month. All attendees will have a chance to leave the event with a free house, with those who purchase tickets sooner having more raffle tickets.

At the Legacy Revolution Event, attendees will learn a great deal about the industry from professionals who have been a part of it for years. They will learn how to find money for all their deals, how to have the proper mindset to succeed and how to build wealth and passive cash flow using tax auction properties. There will be three major partners attending the event, all with a great deal of knowledge and experience in the real estate industry.

Dutch Mendenhall is one of the partners that will be present at the conference, sharing some of the knowledge he has accrued over the course of his career. A former baseball player, Mendenhall began his real estate career as an executive recruiter in a billion dollar company that specialized in commercial real estate and banking. Within 12 months, he was the number 1 producer in the entire company. He currently runs a Real Estate Education company where he mentors thousands of students across the country on investing safely in real estate. He specializes in tax sales and runs three investment funds.

Randle J. Bowling, a real estate entrepreneur, will be sharing what he has learned over a decade of being in the real estate industry. He leads many of the initiatives within Tax Auction Investors and is in charge of legal concerns and special projects. He recently revamped the company's real estate insurance processes and works directly in the evolution of their investment funds.

Amy Vaughn is the third partner who will be attending. Having spent a decade educating other professionals, Vaughn is one of the most sought after consultants in the real estate world. "The student investors Amy trains know she has their best interest at heart," says Vaughn's profile on the Legacy Revolution event page. "She constantly looks after the investors she mentors and protects their best interests. Amy is the backbone of the business for Randle and Dutch. She became a full-fledged partner in 2011. Amy has consistently built her portfolio one property at a time in Florida. She has roots in Philadelphia and was first to open our eyes to the market."

Many investors have worked with Mendenhall, Bowling and Vaughn, and they have all experienced change in their businesses for the better. Regarding his experience working with Dutch, one investor shares, "Being a seasoned investor, I didn't have the time needed to build a successful tax auction portfolio until I met Dutch. Together, we have closed several profitable deals."

Two more investors who worked with Dutch are quoted saying, "At first, we thought this was a scam. We were skeptical because we had been burned before, but Dutch stuck with us and led us down to finally closing our very first deal!"
