August 24, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

ProTorch's recently launched butane torch has been gaining popularity in the Amazon marketplace since its first day. The company has recently reported an average of five stars rating for the product based on customer reviews.

Gus Hess, owner and CEO of ProTorch, is pleased with the torch's reviews. He recently stated, "Our customers are our most important asset. We couldn't be more pleased that they are happy with our products."

Reviews have been coming in at a regular pace and most of them are very high, giving the torch an average of five stars. Consumers find the torch to be easy to use, and as one Amazon purchaser put it, "very much worth every penny." Customers began purchasing the torch the instant that it hit the marketplace, which put a slight halt in its availability during the first few weeks.

The torch initially sold out due to the overwhelming response of customers, but it is now back on the shelves and the company hopes to continue to keep it in stock. "We could not possibly have anticipated this much popularity when we released it," stated Gus Hess. "We are all working hard to ensure that the torch is available for all customers who want it."

ProTorch is a Sydney, Australia-based family-owned and -operated business. The company specializes in high-end micro butane torches. Their first product is made from copper, ceramic, and zinc alloy, and offers a burning time of more than 100 minutes and a flame temperature of 2450 degrees Fahrenheit.

It features an ergonomic non-slip handle and easy controls, as well as a pinpoint precision flame for accurate heating every use. ProTorch designed the butane torch to be easy to refill, taking only about 10 seconds to do so. It is also designed to provide easy one handed use and it comes with a tabletop base for free-hand use, and features a push button self-ignition feature.
