Philadelphia, PA - The experienced Philadelphia personal injury lawyers at Laffey, Buccini & Kent have announced the inauguration of their new law office in Center City.

"Our injury attorneys have been representing victims of personal injuries throughout the State of Pennsylvania for many years now. They've also worked tirelessly to establish themselves as proactive individuals in their local communities," commented Jeffrey Laffey, one of the managing partners at the firm.

Laffey continued, "Our internal research teams identified an underserved population in the region who were employing online search tools to seek out 'personal injury attorneys in Philly'. We are dedicated to finding better ways of serving our own local communities; for this reason, we chose to open a new law office on Walnut Street. Moreover, we've made the services of our personal injury lawyers available to all via free legal consultations so that those who need legal representation the most can find it at no cost to them."

As a personal injury law firm, Laffey, Buccini & Kent deal in many types of cases involving negligence. This section of the law also includes slip and fall claims, medical malpractice, workers' compensation, crime victim lawsuits, and even auto accident claims.
