Window Cleaning Sydney Company Points Out the Benefits of Hiring Professional Window Cleaners

March 11, 2020 -
Clean Group is a Sydney based commercial cleaning company that offers a variety of different services. One of the most popular of which is their professional window cleaning service. They are experts at cleaning everything from single-story shop windows to the wide pane windows found on taller high-rise buildings. The company says that having windows professionally cleaned offers many benefits to the businesses that take advantage of this service.

Suji Siv, owner and CEO of the Clean Group, had this to say about their commercial window cleaning services, ?Window cleaning is something that no one ever really wants to do. This is especially true with the larger size windows that are found on a majority of commercial buildings in Sydney. It?s just a very difficult and time-consuming task to try and keep these types of windows clean and looking good. We at the clean group are here to help. Any company will benefit greatly by having our experienced window cleaning crews keep their commercial property?s windows looking great for them.?

Siv went on to add that the biggest benefit to having his company clean a business?s windows is the end result. He says his crew will arrive on time to do the job and show up in self-contained vans that are stocked with the latest and best window washing equipment. This advanced window cleaning equipment combined with their crew?s window washing experience tends to produce superior results. Not only do their services leave a commercial building?s windows perfectly clean when they are finished, but they will also be streak-free and have a mirror-like shine to them. Siv says this will help make any commercial building's appearance stand out from the buildings around it. The company CEO says this effect can be quite dramatic when their window cleaning services are done on the windows of a high-rise building. He added that his company has over 20-years? experience

According to Siv, another reason that businesses should let professional cleaning companies like the Clean Group clean their windows is for safety reasons. Companies that have their own personnel clean windows that are higher up run the risk of putting these workers in danger. This is especially true when high rise window cleaning is being done. He says that their certified high-rise window cleaning crews follow strict safety protocols and use the latest safety gear when doing this window cleaning task. That includes the use of high-quality ropes, harnesses, and lift equipment.

Siv says that even though businesses see paying professionals such as them to clean their windows see this as an expense, it is actually a cost-saving move on a business?s part. Any business that hires Clean Group to clean their windows does not have to pay and train their own personnel to do the job, buy the expensive equipment it requires, or pay for the other supplies that the job requires to do it properly.

The CEO also said that many Sydney area companies like to use their window cleaning services because they use an eco-friendly method of cleaning. He says they do not use ammonia or any other harsh cleaning solutions that can harm the environment during the window cleaning process. They use solutions that are almost 100% water-based that pass through advanced filters that use carbon fiber technology. Siv says the process also neutralizes the natural electric charge that is found in water. Once the Clean Groups techs wash and rinse the glass in a window, it leaves that window spotless and streak-free so that it leaves brilliantly shined glass. He added that the special filtering process they use to make sure the rinse water is neutral in charge eliminates static and that helps to repel dust and other airborne particles. This means that the recently cleaned windows on that commercial property will continue to look good for a longer period of time.

Siv also wanted to remind people that the Clean Group offers other commercial cleaning services too. This includes office, warehouse, school, childcare center, church, and gym cleaning. For more information on these Sydney window cleaners, Siv says they always welcome inquiries by phone, email or by filling out the quick callback form found on the homepage of his company?s website.
