DUI refers to driving under the influence, which leads to impaired driving. The criminal laws surrounding DUI convictions are very strict in California and can lead to any of a number of very serious, life altering consequences. A DUI can lead to fines, license suspensions and even jail time. Whether one is facing their first DUI or their third, the consequences are still potentially quite serious, and it is usually better to simply do one?s best to avoid them. Drivers should note, however, that each consecutive DUI they are successfully charged with holds increasingly harsher consequences.

As reputable and experienced defense lawyers, the legal team at Los Angeles DUI Lawyer have successfully helped a large number of clients evade the consequences of DUI charges. ?We have shown consistent results,? the firm says. ?This is largely due to our vigorous cross-examination of prosecution witnesses as well as our ability to target technical insufficiencies during trial. Contact us immediately if you are facing charges for a DUI in Los Angeles. The faster you contact us after the offense happened, the better. That way, we can start to build a solid case to defend you at once.?

Of all the DUI charges possible, one is most likely to find themselves being charged with violating the blood alcohol content law. A police officer, if they have reason to suspect a DUI offense, can ask the driver in question to provide breath samples to measure blood alcohol content, and this is how many people end up being charged with driving under the influence. The cutoff for legal drinking is 8 milligrams in 100 milliliters of blood. This evidence can be used to prosecute one when they go to trial.

?When defending our clients in Los Angeles, we try to establish a thorough cross-examination of prosecution witnesses, and we utilize the presentation of other evidence proving that the taking of breath samples may have violated the Charter of Rights and Freedom,? the firm says. ?Hence, we may also argue that the evidence should be excluded as the BAC results can be recorded falsely. Before giving you a California DUI breath test, an officer must continuously observe you for fifteen minutes in order to ensure that, during this time you do not put anything containing alcohol into your mouth, including drinks, medicines or mouth wash etc.?
