March 16, 2020 -

The Mortgage Bureau has announced that they have recently launched a new website for their office in Cambridge, England. The purpose of the new website is to provide better navigation for users. Furthermore, the site is now mobile responsive, which makes it easy to visit the website using a mobile device. The company is a provider of advice on home financing for people who are planning to live or are living near Cambridge. Their service is very much needed by first-time buyers who would like to make sure that they will be getting the best deal when it comes to financing their home purchase. Also, The Mortgage Bureau wants to develop a long-term relationship with all clients, so that they can help homeowners to easily renegotiate their home financing whenever a better deal becomes possible.

A representative for The Mortgage Bureau says, ?Our newly launched website will allow our users to navigate to various parts of the site much more easily. But most of all, people who are looking for help may be able to find it easier to find what they are looking for. We?ve been offering advice on mortgages to customers living near Cambridge for 30 years. First-time buyers, in particular, can take advantage of quotes from the whole of the market rather than being tied to just one source of finance. All clients benefit from the long-term relationship that includes regular reviews. This means they can renegotiate their home financing with a better deal when it makes financial sense for them to do so.?

Meanwhile, homebuyers can also take advantage of the fact that The Cambridge office of The Mortgage Bureau is independent of all estate agents. This implies that the estate agents will have no knowledge about their budget for buying a home. This allows them to negotiate the best possible price on the new home that they plan to purchase. This is also advantageous for buy to let landlords who are trying to build their property portfolios.

An important result of their being independent of lenders and estate agents is that client information is assured to be private and confidential because they don?t share any systems or office space with estate agents who may have interests that are in conflict with that of the home purchaser. With this, the property seller or agent is not aware of the buyer?s budget. This implies that their clients would be able to really negotiate the best possible price on the house they are planning to buy. Also, as independent financial advisors, they are able to suggest the most competitive life insurance products that are available from all providers.

The representative from The Mortgage Bureau adds, ?Homebuyers benefit from the fact that The Mortgage Bureau is independent of all estate agents which ensures that their budget is never known to the selling agent. We also provide services specifically for those with the right to buy their council houses, anyone with a poor credit rating struggling to obtain a loan, businesses wishing to obtain property-backed commercial loans and the associated insurance products required for mortgage agreements.?

The Cambridge office of The Mortgage Bureau is strategically situated in a prime location on East Road by The Grafton Centre. Their nearest other offices are in Peterborough, Ely, or Bury Saint Edmunds, in case one of these is more conveniently located. They serve customers from Essex, Norfolk, Cambridgeshire, Suffolk, Bedfordshire and neighbouring counties and they also have an office in London.

Those interested can easily reach their Cambridge office through direct trains that depart from London every 10 to 15 minutes throughout the day. By train, the average travel time is from 45 minutes to an hour.

People who are mortgage prisoners, or those who have not been able to pay off much of the amount they owe because of high interests, may want to visit the website of The Mortgage Bureau in Cambridge to find out out how they may be able to renegotiate a new mortgage. Or they can contact them on the phone or through email. They are open from Monday to Friday, from 9:00 am to 5:30 pm.
