The Painting Pros is a company that does both commercial and residential painting in and around the San Jose, California area. They are also a contractor that places a heavy emphasis on the commercial painting side of the business. What this means is that they recognize that the needs of their commercial painting customers are somewhat different from those of their residential painting customers.

Cleve Dayton, the company?s founder and president, elaborated on this more by saying, ?We are a painting contractor that prides ourselves on being flexible to our customers' needs. That?s one of the reasons that our company has been going strong since 1978. This is especially true with the commercial side of our painting business. While some companies say they do both commercial and residential work, very few actually have the capacity to satisfy both large and small size painting needs. The Painting Pros is the exception to that rule. We have the knowledge, experience, and equipment to handle even the biggest commercial painting projects. Our company also realizes that it takes close coordination with any business that wants us to do a large size painting project for them. That?s why our big commercial painting projects always go smoothly from start to finish.?

The company president also said his crews also realize they have to do everything possible not to interfere with a business?s daily routine when they are doing a commercial painting job for them. Dayton says that?s why they are so flexible when it comes to scheduling their commercial painting projects. He says it?s not uncommon for their crews to work nights and weekends to minimize the impact downtime from painting would cause for any of their commercial customers.

Dayton went on to add that his company does both interior and exterior commercial property painting. He says they have painted medical facilities, restaurants, hotels, schools, retail stores, business offices, industrial buildings, churches and more. The Panting Pros places no size limit on their commercial projects because they have the manpower and experience to efficiently get any business?s painting needs taken care of for them. He says they also have invested heavily in the latest and best equipment which allows them to do high volume painting projects. Dayton says that for their interior commercial painting jobs they will even use low-VOC paints to cut down on fumes and industrial-size fans to speed up drying time.

The company president also wanted to remind people that they do much more than just commercial and residential painting too. That includes a full line of drywall repair services. They also do deck refinishing, rent out a painter for the day, and offer expert color consultation services.

Dayton says they always try to be a company that keeps up with modern business trends. Evidence of that is they were one of the first companies in the San Jose area to be ?certified green?. He says that they are also a Lead-Safe company that is certified with the Environmental Protection Agency. Among the many accolades that have been presented to The Painting Pros for the way they go about doing their business is the prestigious Diamond Certified Award. This an award that is given out only to companies that combine high-quality work with exceptional customer service. There is a rigorous 12-step certification process that a company must go through to receive this award and only companies that receive a score of 90% or higher from actual customer surveys are eligible for it.

Here is a review from Debra C. that shows why customers are so satisfied with The Painting Pros services, ?We were happy with everything. Their bid was accurate, they showed up on time, they cleaned up after themselves, and they were pretty much everything you could want. They set our expectations properly.?

For more information on this commercial painter in San Jose, the president of the company says they welcome phone calls, emails, and will respond quickly to those that fill out the contact form on the company?s website.
