

NDDMARCHTX Discusses Why Spring is a Great Time to Get Demolition Work Done

April 10, 2020

April 10, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Next Day Demolition wants to remind those in the Dallas/Ft. Worth Metroplex that spring is the perfect time to get demolition work done. They say springtime demolition is a natural fit to go along with the other home and business exterior improvements that are often being done at this time of year. These Fort Worth, TX demolition contractors have proven to be a trusted partner when it comes to taking care of the demolition and site clean-up needs of homeowners, commercial clients, government organizations, realtors, and more.

Company representative, S. Gordon, had this to say about why spring is a great time for people in the Dallas/Ft. Worth area to do the demolition work they have been putting off, "As many people in the area get ready to do some spring cleaning, we believe any demolitions that need to be done around a home or business should be part of that. We have the advanced equipment and experienced personnel available that are willing to do everything from the smallest to the very largest demolition projects. Demolition companies like ours work efficiently, safely, and are competitively priced. That means no one ever has to worry about putting up with the rundown buildings and unwanted structures on their property any longer."

The spokesperson for this Fort Worth Texas demolition company mentioned that spring is a time of year when home and business owners go to great lengths to make their properties look great and stand out from those around them. He says that rundown buildings and other structural eyesores will still take away from a property's looks no matter how good the rest of that property looks. The company is always prepared to be a part of any home or business owner's attempts to improve the looks of their property.

Gordon also reminds that spring is a very active time for children and they will sometimes use structures that need demolition as play areas. Things such as run-down garages, decaying storage buildings, and other dilapidated structures pose a great danger for wandering children as they play in and around them. He says their company will not only completely remove these unwanted structures but they will also do a thorough site cleanup to make sure no debris is left behind that can harm children playing in the area.

The company wants customers to know that they always use the best safety practices whenever they are doing any type of demolition task. In addition to that, they are also now being very proactive as far as coronavirus safety is concerned. Gordon says they will stay away from occupants near a demolition site as much as possible when working and they are also keeping a close eye on their own workers to make sure they stay healthy and take the proper virus precautions as recommended by government and local health officials. He emphasized that the safety and health of their employees and those nearby a job site will always be their top priority. As usual, Next Day Demolition will continue to dispose of the debris from their job sites in an environmentally responsible manner. He says they will do this even if it takes extra time and effort on their part to get the job done. They will also make sure that such demolition materials as wood, metal, brick, asphalt, trees, and other yard waste get recycled.

According to Gordon, some of the types of demolition that the company specializes in include the demolition and removal of derelict homes, dealing with asbestos tainted buildings, emergency demolition of fire-damaged and flood-impacted buildings, disconnection and disposal of swimming pools, and the clearing and grading of debris on vacant lots. Next Day Demolition also offers free site inspections and estimates and they are fully certified, licensed, and insured demolition contractor. Gordon added that their company is one of the leading demolition contractors in Arlington and the surrounding areas because they always go to great lengths when it comes to job site safety, work area cleanliness, and the timely completion of the demolition projects that they take on.
