Commonwealth Waste Solutions, a septic tank cleaning service in the Commonwealth state of Virginia, has released an announcement urging aspiring home buyers not to shy away from closing the deal on a new home with a septic system. The company, based in Mechanicsville, Virginia, provides essential septic tank pumping and cleaning services, covering all the routine maintenance needs of septic tank owners. According to the announcement, home buyers who are unfamiliar with septic systems often assume the worst about living in a home with a septic system before doing their homework. Commonwealth Waste Solutions encourages all potential home buyers to learn about septic systems before dismissing them as a viable option. This information can be found on their website at <http://cwsseptic.com/hanover-county>.

One common misconception among home buyers is that septic systems are outdated and unpopular. In reality, as many as 1 in every five homes has a functional septic system, and this may even increase as more homes are built in rural areas. Another misconception is that septic systems are highly susceptible damage or failure, meaning users need to be extra careful with their sensitive system and are more likely to have emergencies. With proper maintenance, such as the services provided by Commonwealth Waste Solutions, a septic system can provide seamless septic services to a home for more than 40 years.

One caveat the company offers is that many home inspections, performed during the home buying process, don't put proper focus on the septic system and can often overlook existing maintenance issues that may cause damage or failure down the line if not promptly addressed. For this reason, Commonwealth Waste Solutions urges home buyers to insist on a thorough inspection of their new home's septic system from a septic system professional before placing an offer on the home. Commonwealth Waste Solutions is happy to offer these professional services in and around Mechanicsville, VA. Commonwealth Waste Solutions provides services for both residential and commercial septic systems. These include septic tank pumping and cleaning, septic system inspections for real estate purposes, septic system repairs, and specialized cleaning such as hydro jetting or grease trap cleaning. Grease Trap cleaning is especially important for commercial septic systems which prepare or serve food, such as restaurants, hotels, schools, and hospitals. The large scale production of food creates grease remnants on the pots and pans used to prepare the food as well as the dishes used for serving the food. When this grease is washed off the pots, pans and dishes, it flows into the sewer or septic system and can create problematic buildup which causes problems for the proper functioning of the sewer or septic tank. For this reason, food service buildings often have grease traps, which municipalities require are properly maintained on a regular basis, to avoid problems with grease. These services and more are provided to residents and companies in Hanover County, VA by the septic servicing company Commonwealth Waste Solutions. They also serve Charles City County, Chesterfield County, and Henrico County.

Commonwealth Waste Solutions customers have high praise for the company and their services. One customer, Christopher C., says, "Jason was prompt and was quick to locate my buried septic tank lid that I had never known was there since i had been in the house for only 5 years. The pumping commenced and Jason answered all the septic tank maintenance questions I had. When the pumping was done, he did a good job of refilling the hole and covering up the spot. The price seemed fair to me at $210 dollars, so the next time 5 years rolls around, I won't hesitate to call Jason at Commonwealth Waste Solutions. Nice work."
