Towson, MD - Interest in metal roofing is skyrocketing in Baltimore and homeowners now have a powerful new company created to help meet the demand right at their fingertips. Towson Roofing Pros, a Baltimore-based home roofing provider, recently announced their new material offering of metal roofing. Towson Roofing Pros is one of only three providers who offer metal roofing to clients residing in Towson and surrounding Baltimore communities. They also publish a recent blog post about their metal roofing service on their website.

Thanks to their exclusive metal roofing offering, Towson Roofing Pros can provide customers the durability, longevity and visual beauty of a metal roofing. Metal roofing is popular not only for the design flexibility and style it offers, but for long term value when it comes to protecting a home, reducing environmental impacts, and increasing energy efficiency.

The ability to make metal roofing look like other more traditional construction materials affords consumers the opportunity to use a variety of colors and designs. Essentially, it can be used to mimic other materials but with the added benefits of durability and longevity. Metal roofing or a metal shingle roof can last several decades and in the long run cost less over its lifetime than cheaper alternatives.

"As metal roofing increases in popularity, more of our customers are requesting it. We are pleased that we can now offer them an eco-friendly solution with outstanding value and aesthetics," says Towson Roofing Pros. Baltimore's climate provides many challenges to the protection and preservation of our homes. The roof is a home's first defense against rain, wind, snow, rain, and more rain. Putting a temporary roof over a structure that you are attempting to restore, improve, or construct is a waste of precious resources. Manufactured from recycled aluminum, a classic metal roofing system helps save natural resources while deciding on a lifetime roof saves homeowners both time and money. Once and done.

"Whether it's due to the outstanding longevity and durability in severe climate conditions, or homeowners are realizing the huge variety of design and style options that are available, the demand for metal roofing is literally through the roof," said Julius Mills, owner of Towson Roofing Pros. "Our goal is to be the leading installer of metal roofing in the Towson and great Baltimore metropolitan area."

"Metal has grown to 14 percent of the overall U.S. roofing market just in the last few years," said Mills. "We don't anticipate that slowing down anytime soon, so we want to be sure that homeowners have the resources available to make informed decisions and a wise investment."

Those who are interested in metal roofing can read Towson Roofing Pros' recent post. They are local to Towson and are offering free roofing estimates. A representative of the company described the approach that the company will be taking as they move forward and grow within the Towson area, saying, "We arrived in the Baltimore community with a clear mindset and a well-defined set of missions: To deliver the best service possible, at a price that fit the average community member's budget. We will strive to improve our services constantly, as to not let our beloved community members down. We have been looking forward to offering metal roofing for a long time and, now that it is an option, we will not settle for anything short of perfection when it comes to installing the new material for our clients."
