April 02, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Phoenix, Arizona based security company Covey Security is issuing an advisory on the effect that COVID-19 has on public safety and security. The company has also announced that their team of highly skilled security officers are trained to serve on the front lines facing this pandemic at hospitals, grocery stores and distribution centers.

Covey Security provides security services to help maintain order and monitor suspicious activity within the local community. The company highlights that cases of petty theft have increased in recent weeks as buildings are mostly vacant, and properties are left unsecured during the pandemic. Criminals are taking advantage of the situation because the general public is has been ordered to stay at home for their own personal safety and the safety of others. In fact, the latest reports show that thieves are getting more creative, with some of them even posing as public health officials.

Tucker Quayle, the company's owner, says, "At Covey Security, we provide reliable and dependable Phoenix patrol services to help deter crimes like vagrancy, burglary and theft. The current lockdowns and community quarantine declarations in a number of states and municipalities proved the need for stricter security solutions to ensure the health and safety of our communities, especially in the greater Phoenix area.?

In order for the businesses and communities to avoid becoming a victim of crime during this period, Mr. Quayle places a great deal of emphasis on the importance of hiring a reputable security company, such as Covey Security.

He points out that the company orients and assists their clients in identifying the best security solution to fit their unique needs. Additionally, the company takes pride in having a team of highly trained security professionals who can adapt to the situation at hand and meet client?s security requirements. ?At Covey Security, we will serve as your first line of defense in battling opportunists who wish to take advantage of the pandemic. Our security officers will work tirelessly to keep you and your property safe,? says Mr. Quayle.

Tighter security also plays a big role in preventing and slowing down the transmission of the virus. In order to ?flatten the curve? security officers must be on high alert to maintain the safety of communities, stopping the disease from spreading like wildfire from one person to another. In addition to crime prevention, security officers are on the front lines in enforcing safety rules and regulations as well as ensuring peace and order. Mr. Quayle states that many communities need security personnel during these challenging times because COVID-19 threatens not just the global economy and people?s health, but also their safety.

Meanwhile, due to the serious nature of the outbreak, the Phoenix security company has implemented additional safety measures and revised their existing procedures at the properties they are protecting. Mr. Quayle says that, in addition to providing security services, each client?s health and safety are also at the top of the company?s priorities.

Covey Security also provides security services for healthcare spaces and retail stores. The company can protect a variety of establishments from thieves as well as cover crowd control and implement stricter social distancing guidelines to prevent the spread of the virus. Notably, their security officers are duly licensed by the Arizona Department of Public Safety.

Mr. Quayle says, ?Covey Security was founded with principles that set us apart from our competitors. We adapt and strive to make the properties we serve a safe and secure place for our clients. We work closely with each site to make sure that systems and procedures are in place to allow our officers to be proactive in their duties.?
