Virginia based Steadfast Tree Care Spotsylvania is reaching out to the wider community to warn them of the dangers of amateur tree removal. One of the leading tree care services in Virginia, the company provides their expert services to the local community and the surrounding areas.

In an article published on their company website, Steadfast Tree Care Spotsylvania outlines why tree removal is a dangerous activity to be done using the DIY, or Do It Yourself, method. In the blog post, the company explains that homeowners who attempt to fell a tree on their own may be injured by the tree, their faulty equipment or falling/flying debris. The article goes on to explore the common dangers of tree removal, the first of which is the fact that decayed wood in dead or dying trees often rots from the inside out. This is not a phenomenon that is observable from the outside and is not something that a layperson would be able to detect. The inner decay/rot can cause the tree to become very unstable, and if someone were to attempt cutting it down on their own, the tree may fall unexpectedly, causing property damage and/or hurting people nearby.

Steadfast Tree Care Spotsylvania also points out that not everyone has the required equipment to cut down trees. In the blog post, the company warns against using basic equipment to fell trees as these devices are not suited for this. In fact, they are only liable to cause more work and more danger for all parties in the vicinity. Further, the company also explains that arborists and tree specialists are all trained and well-versed in the correct usage of the heavy equipment that is often used in tree removal. This equipment includes chainsaws, ropes and cranes. Arborists and tree specialists also use industrial safety equipment, many if not all of which are not commonly available for consumer use.

The article also warns that gravity is the worst enemy to someone who is not proficient in tree removal. Steadfast Tree Care Spotsylvania explains that once a tree actually starts falling, the person cutting it down has little to no control over it. Professional tree contractors take measures to combat this by utilizing expert techniques to cut the tree at the right place and the right time to ensure it falls in a safe location. Tree experts also use ropes to maintain an extra degree of safety.

Phillip Wood of Steadfast Tree Care Spotsylvania says, "As important as it is to cut down or remove trees to maintain the overall health of your lawn, it must be stated that tree removal is not something you should attempt by yourself. If you have a tree that needs to be cut down, just get in touch with a professional tree expert. They'll get the job done safely, and you can carry on with your life without any worries."

The company recently published another article that provides guidance for summer tree care. Wood says, "As tree professionals, we are all about protecting nature and taking care of it. As part of that goal, we always like to pass on useful tips and advice to our customers so that they can keep their trees hale and hearty. What with summer coming, trees will need some special care so that they can grow well and stay healthy. We believe that a little goes a long way in the summer when it comes to protecting our surroundings. After all, it's the trees that keep our landscapes looking good, among many other uses we take for granted?"

In the article, the company mentions that the summer months are not usually the preferred time of the year to do tree trimming, so it can be beneficial if this task is carried out earlier in the year. The company emphasizes that this is especially true when it comes to the removal of dead, dying or diseased branches. The article also mentions that early summer tree trimming can be very beneficial for the health of trees that had already bloomed in the spring and have now completely finished with that cycle.
