Carolina Sound, Stage & Lighting, a forward-thinking multimedia company based in Charlotte, North Carolina, is offering churches the means for their services to look and sound better during the COVID-19 pandemic.

The company is using their technology and expertise to offer churches the means to comply with social distancing requirements while providing faith and comfort to their parishioners during this difficult time. Those interested can follow them on Facebook.

Previously to now the churches used a virtual service as an option for those who were unable to attend regular services, but because of recent circumstances, virtual services have become commonplace.

Carolina Sound, Stage & Lighting is well placed to assist with the technical challenges that churches encounter with live streaming, as well as provide additional lighting or upgrade current lighting systems in order to make the videos appear better on computers or smartphones.

In addition, Carolina Sound, Stage & Lighting has a wide selection of lecterns, pipe & drape, staging, and video projection equipment to help convert any space into a house of worship, ready to stream the Good Word to the world.

Carolina Sound, Stage & Lighting also provides premium staging for festivals, concerts, corporate events, bands, theatrics and houses of worship. They provide sound systems that are custom-built and tailored to the specific requirements of artists and venues. Depending on the ordinances, churches may be able to use these sound systems for their worship services in an open space.

Since following social distancing guidelines is crucial, having drive-in service in an open space is tangible as long as everyone can hear the service. Although Carolina Sound Stage & Lighting is known for providing large PA systems to cover events that are spread over vast areas, the event production company can also broadcast sound through FM radio, making Sunday service accessible through everyone's car. This can be useful in cases where noise levels must be kept to a minimum due to city ordinances.

Danny Erivez from Carolina Sound, Stage & Lighting says, "While the global COVID-19 pandemic continues to alter the way we live our lives, Carolina Sound, Stage & Lighting is here to make sure the church's message can be heard. Although we're not used to worshiping from our cars and from our computers/smartphones, we can help make sure your service looks and sounds the best it can from these two options."
