April 09, 2020 -

Rockford and its surrounding areas has been hit by large hails in a storm that has left behind a lot of home damages. In most cases, home owners have reported roof, siding and car damages. These damages are accelerated by the fact that the storm also comes with strong winds that can break branches or fall trees. A Rockford Storm Damage Contractor, Fresh Page Home Improvement, has recently explained that trees are a big risk when it comes to storms and storm damage.

According to the Rockford storm damage contractor, ?Trees are great, we basically have nothing against trees because they support the cycle of the ecosystem. However, when trees are growing too close to the home, they might pose a risk especially during a storm. We all know that storms are associated with strong winds. When these winds blow, and are combined with hail, it is easy for branches to break and trees to fall. If the tree is growing too close to your home, the breaking branches and the falling trees will definitely cause some damages to your home and other properties. As a result, you might me dealing with extensive damage that could have been avoided if the right steps were followed.?

Speaking about the recent storm, the contractor said, ?There are many home owners that are dealing with home damage caused by trees and branches. This is why you need professional help when it comes to storm damage preparedness. Always watch your trees, overhanging branches should be trimmed. If you think the tree is growing too close you your home and is posing a risk, you can have it felled. Trim your hedges and make sure there are no leaves falling on the roof because these might also cause a lot of damage.?
