Manassas, Va.- Award Crafters, a corporate gifts store in Manassas, VA, has recently announced the addition of their back to the office awards to their corporate gifts selection. Back to the office awards are provided for customers, particularly office managers or employers, who want to welcome back their employees. Award Crafters wanted to provide employers a fun way to welcome back their employees when businesses reopen, and employees come back to the office.

Award Crafters is offering fun and helpful gifts such as pens, badges, and small awards for employers to give to their employees. Small welcome back gifts can really improve people?s spirits and set the tone for a positive work environment.

Amidst the COVID-19 or Coronavirus pandemic, most businesses have closed their physical locations and moved to work remotely until it is safe to work in public places again. Besides essential businesses and workers, nearly everyone in America has confined their life to their homes. Nonessential businesses, such as promotional items stores in Manassas have been struggling during this time. They have either had to lay off employees or change everything about their business so that it could still function online.

Employers that have an entire staff working from home are probably looking forward to having everyone back in the office. Working remotely presents many challenges that can be fixed by working in person.

Although it is unclear when life will go back to the way it once was, April and most of May will be dominated by quarantines and social distancing. To help small businesses like Award Crafters, try to purchase goods or services from them that will also benefit one?s own business such as back to the office awards.
