KratomSpace is proud to announce that they have just launched a new company website. The new site is very well-rounded and is designed to be a community of knowledge into what Kratom is and how the health supplements that are derived from it are used. It's a site that's also meant to be highly reader-supported and does not directly offer any kratom based products for sale.

Company spokesperson, Briana Michelle, had this to say about the new website launch, "We are thrilled to have our new website accessible online now. Those of us here at KratomSpace have worked so hard to get to this point. We were anxious to finally get our site up and running so it can better educate people about what Kratom is. As with many newer products that come into the health and wellness market, there are so many untruths and misconceptions that surround our Kratom products. This website gives those that are interested in this product some spot-on information about what it does and what its intended uses are. We designed it to be an informational portal about the world of Kratom use and we feel it really accomplishes that."

Michelle went on to say that for those who are not familiar with Kratom, it's a preparation that's made using leaves taken from a particular Southeast Asian evergreen tree, the Mitragyna speciosa. This tree is a member of the Rubiaceae family along with other plants such as coffee. Although the name itself is thought to be Thai in origin, the plant can be found in abundance in Thailand, Indonesia, Malaysia, Myanmar, and Papua New Guinea. It has long been used in traditional medicines in these countries and beyond. The leaves of Kratom are dried and smoked, put into capsule or pill form, or made into a tea to give them properties that are thought to be medicinal.

The spokesperson added that the new website is broken up into 5 different drop-down menu categories.

These include Kratom Strains, Uses, Education, Vendors, and Deals. As was pointed out, Michelle feels that the most important section is the one on Kratom education. She did want to state that even though they have a website section dedicated to Kratom education, all the different drop-down menu categories have educational elements to them. The company spokesperson said that this was exactly what they had intended to do as they were planning the design of the website.

Michelle said the educational section itself was done using a blog-style format. That was the best way to provide site users with a wide variety of Kratom information. She says that way there are Kratom subjects in this section that will be of interest to almost anyone who is curious about the use of Kratom-based products. Some of the article titles in this section include "Will Kratom Cause A Positive Drug Test?" and the "Best Herbal Apothecaries In New York. There is one article that distinguishes the important differences between Kratom and opioids and another that contains a map of the locations in the 50 states where the use of Kratom is legal. The company spokesperson said that one of the most informational articles in this section is the "Kratom Resources" Post. It gives important facts on this health supplement and talks about how now there are an estimated 15.6 million Kratom users now in the USA.

The spokesperson went on to say that the Uses drop-down category on the new website is pretty self-explanatory. It goes over some of the most common ways that people like to use different versions of this health supplement. She added that Kratom is not a one-size-fits-all type of health supplement either. That's why one drop-down menu selection talks about the different Strains of this plant and their best uses. The Vendor and Deals categories talk about the current players in the Kratom supply market and some of the best value buys that a Kratom user will find.

For those individuals that are interested to take a look at KratomSpace's new website, Michelle says it can be seen here at <https://kratomspace.com>.
