Double G Pest Control, a Quincy Illinois based pest control service, would like to make home and business owners in the area aware of the availability of their services. The company helps their clients deal with ants and a variety of other pests across West Central Illinois and Northeastern Missouri. The services offered by Double G Pest Control include ant extermination, ant control and ant removal for both commercial and residential clients.

According to the 2010 Pest Control Attitudes and Usage survey, which was carried out by the National Pest Management Association, ants are the primary pest control problem (ahead of termites, crawlers, cockroaches and even mosquitos). Ants are incredibly common, and queen ants can live for years, during which time they produce millions of ants. This means that ant infestations are particularly difficult to handle due to the sheer number of ants that may be present around one's property.

When dealing with an ant infestation, it is usually better to contact a professional to provide an effective, permanent solution to the ant problem. "You might be tempted to handle your ant problems on your own, and you might even succeed in getting rid of them for a while," the company says. "The problem is, a lot of the time they just end up coming back. A professional knows how to effectively get rid of pests like ants and how to get rid of them for good. Our job is to get rid of the pest for you and make sure that they don't come back any time soon. Another dilemma you may face is that the pests you're trying to regulate evolve in the environment to sooner or later become immune to pest control methods that have long been used. Again, another reason to use a professional pest control service that keeps up with the latest improvements in techniques, chemicals or biological treatment methods for controlling the pests you want to manage or exterminate."

The biggest concern that homeowners in the Quincy area have when dealing with pests is the fact that certain pests can cause serious damage to property, spread disease and even cause death through allergic reactions. Carpenter ants, for example, are very common across the US and are the largest of all common ant varieties. They chew through wood like termites, except they do so to develop nests and passages that can cause serious damage to the wood around one's home. An ant exterminator knows how to find, identify and get rid of ants in and around any piece of property.

The pest management service also helps with a variety of other pests. As the company says, "No one likes pests. That's why they are called pests. Unfortunately, pests come in such a wide variety of forms that it can seem nearly impossible to rid your space of pests, especially if you don't know where to begin." The company helps people deal with rodents, termites and more and makes it a point to ensure that homeowners are not left to handle pests on their own.

Many have left excellent reviews on a number of platforms praising the company's excellent services. One Google review states, "Greg/Double G Pest Control do pest control for my home to keep out mice and, during the season, roach control and other insects. Life in the country means you have to deal with bugs. He does a great job and the price is right. Highly recommend Greg."

Another review on the same platform says, "Greg at Double G Pest Control has been doing my business location and my river camp pest control for several years now. Call Greg if you need a real professional pest control guy to get the job done right. Thanks, Greg."
