

Ridgeline Roofers Publishes Online Roofing Document for Homeowner Education

April 30, 2020

COLUMBIA, MD - April 30, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Columbia, MD - Ridgeline Roofers, a Howard County, roofing company has published a document describing the roofing process. The 17-page roofing guide clearly explains everything a homeowner needs to know about the roofing process, from how to get a fair roofing estimate and clean up procedures to reading between the lines of materials and workmanship warranties.

Best of all, you don't have to be familiar with roofing or roofing lingo to understand it. The roofing document was written especially for homeowners who need easy-to-read, objective information to help plan and budget for installing a new roof.

“Even if homeowners do not choose Ridgeline Roofers as their Columbia roofing contractor, we still want them to have this information. Unless you're in the roofing industry, it's not immediately obvious whether or not your roof was properly installed. Roofing problems associated with poor roofing installation or subpar materials can surface many years later,” explains Ernest Krebs, company owner and founder.

He added: "We are proud of our experienced roofing professionals, but we always keen to support and encourage our staff's knowledge and learning. There are always new trends and technology is constantly evolving and changing. If we limit ourselves, we are also limiting the quality of services that we can provide our customers. We want to give our customers the satisfaction of having the best and latest roofing systems and receiving this award has just made it more possible for us to reach our goals."

The roofing process document covers important information every homeowner should know before hiring a residential roofer. The guide reviews how to get a roofing estimate, what to look and look out for and factors impacting a new roof's cost. There are sections educating consumers on how a roof should be properly installed, along with how to determine whether or not to replace or reuse gutters and downspouts. Readers also learn why the final clean up is a clear indicator of how well the roofer installed the roof. The Fort Myers Roof Repair Company can help you with that.

The roofing guide is available as a downloadable PDF on the company's website. The roofing process document is also given to Ellicott City and Clarksville homeowners who request a free roofing estimate from Ridgeline Roofers.

Ridgeline Roofers requires contractors to be properly licensed, be adequately insured for your protection, have a proven track record of successful jobs and be committed to ongoing professional training in order to ensure that their roofing remodels and installations are of the highest quality. Every certified contractor is able to provide their customers with a professional installation and superior protection to common roofing issues. In addition, GAF certified contractors also offer special warranty options.

The GAF certification also means that the contractor is dedicated to offering fantastic customer service. Ridgeline Roofers is accredited roofing contractor, meaning they have a serious dedication to their customers and uphold their duty to provide their clients with reliable roofing services. Only around 6% of roofing contractors in America have achieved the GAF certification.

Ridgeline Roofers also offer materials and products by well-known companies such as Owens Corning and Atlas. The GAF certification adds to their already extensive collection of certifications and licenses. With over thirty years of experience in the roofing and construction sector, Ridgeline Roofers takes pride in the work they carry out and their recent acquisition of the GAF certification is a testament to their dedication to the customer.
