Seattle, WA -- Even before the COVID-19 pandemic, it was normal for some households to buy bottled water. Raymark Plumbing and Sewer is a local plumbing company in Seattle, WA highlighting the quality of the tap water in the area. The residents of Seattle know that their tap water is safe to drink and that it naturally tastes good.

This information comes as good news for those in Seattle as there are areas around the country with reports of major contaminants and bad tastes in local tap water. For Seattle residents, Raymark recommends avoiding bottled water. Not only does this leave the availability of bottled water open for those who have a need for safe drinking water, but it also reduces the use of plastic.

During the COVID-19 pandemic, it is critical that everyone does their part to help in any way possible to cut down on unnecessary waste and ensure vital resources are available to all. For those living in the Seattle area, choosing tap water over bottled water can help make a difference to keep bottled water available to those who are in need.

This week, the nation celebrates the 50th anniversary of Earth Day, a movement that brings awareness to the world's choices and their impacts on the environment. Choosing to not buy plastic is a small but great step in helping humans survive on planet Earth.
