Long Island, NY - The Long Island personal injury attorneys at Banville Law have announced their next legal webinar.

“The next date for our webinar will be on April 30th, 2020, at 9:30 PM, and we plan on sharing insightful information regarding how to handle personal injury accidents. Throughout New York, our legal team has helped thousands of victims receive compensation for injuries suffered due to an accident. For this reason, the purpose of this webinar is to provide individuals with important information on legal options they may have when considering a personal injury lawsuit,” explains Laurence Banville, Esq.

Banville Law’s injury lawyers in Long Island have helped residents in New York and surrounding areas with a variety of personal injury cases over the years. The legal team offers services to assist individuals with cases such as medical malpractice claims, slip, trip and falls, workplace accidents, and auto accidents.

Mr. Banville goes on to share, “The first question clients ask is what can we do to help them during their difficult time. Our legal team understands the stress a personal injury can cause, physically and mentally.

Because of this, we work carefully to analyze the facts of the claim, identify all possible legal options, and support the client in the course of action they decide. If the client chooses to pursue legal action, we handle all aspects of the claim from the initial filing process, collecting evidence, interviewing possible witnesses all while answering any questions the client may have.?

If residents of Long Island would like to participate in the webinar, sign up by emailing info@banvillelaw.com.
