Homeowners will be well aware of the fact that wood destroying insects such as termites can do far more than aesthetic damage to a property. The true danger with termites is that the damage they do can go unnoticed for extended periods of time, and many parts of a home may need to be refurbished entirely by the time an infestation is identified. In addition to the unsightly destruction, residents will unfortunately be forced to deal with extensive bills if they require a contractor's assistance repairing their home.

The key factor here is timing. According to the company, any resident in the area they cover is welcome to reach out to the company in order to schedule a termite inspection if they suspect an infestation. "Get in touch with us and we'll stop by your house to look it over," states Bob Jenkins Pest & Lawn Services. "We're familiar with how local houses are built and where termites like to hide, so you can rely on us to uncover any termite problems if they are there to be found. Should we detect any signs of termite life on your property, we will take immediate action with termiticide treatment." Learn more at the following link: <http://pest-control-sa.com>.

Notably, Bob Jenkins Pest & Lawn Services upholds a commitment to ensuring the safety of both the families they serve as well as the environment. Due to this reason, they utilize only the least toxic and environmentally-friendly products on the market when they perform an extermination. The company clarifies, "We want to get rid of the insects or other pests that are causing you grief, but we also want to be careful to do so without causing any collateral damage to your family, the local environment or the harmless creatures that inhabit it. Such a service requires a careful hand to ensure eradication is completed in a safe manner."

They continue, "Each one of our exterminators is professional, experienced, certified and qualified to carry out all of our pest control treatment. Exterminating is our profession, so we know what we're doing. When we apply any treatment in your home, we always take all of the necessary safety precautions to ensure that your household is risk-free. The safety of you and your family is imperative to us. When you call us about a pest problem, we'll work hard to make your home into a less toxic and dangerous environment by exterminating the pests."

Many members of the community will also be concerned how the company intends to offer these services during the COVID-19 pandemic and its associated Shelter-In-Place protocols. Bob Jenkins Pest & Lawn Services offers reassurance on this point, explaining that they have adjusted the way they carry out their work in order to minimize, if not completely eliminate, any and all person-to-person contact. In addition to having their teams work in staggered shifts and regularly disinfecting their equipment, for instance, the company is able to carry out inspections while maintaining safe social distancing. Thanks to the care they already take in keeping their customers free from exposure to pesticides and similar products, Bob Jenkins Pest & Lawn Services has had a great deal of success adapting their existing policies to suit new requirements.

More information regarding their services can be found on the company's website. In addition to termites, the company offers pest control services for a wide variety of other animals and insects, including rats, spiders, mosquitoes, bed bugs and so on.
