May 01, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Furnace Repair Mississauga is proud to announce that it has expanded its existing HVAC services to include a new duct cleaning service. This addition enables the company to offer its customers an even better service than before.

Most homeowners and business owners do not give much thought to their HVAC systems until something goes wrong. By the time that happens it is usually too late to do anything but repair or replace the system which can be very expensive. It does not have to be that way of course. Regular inspection, maintenance, and cleaning can not only help keep a system running smoothly, but even extend the system's useful working life. Maintenance is nearly always cheaper than repair and far cheaper than replacement.

When someone moves into a new house or a business owner takes over a new property it would be prudent for them to have an inspection carried out. The previous owners may never have had cleaning carried out and without an inspection it will not be known what condition the system is in. On the outside a system may look great but what is on the inside might be a different matter entirely.

Even what appears to be the simplest of HVAC systems is actually a complex machine and like any machine it will work best when it is properly cleaned and maintained. Duct cleaning is an important part of an HVAC maintenance schedule and failure to clean means the system will work less efficiently. A less efficient system will not only cost more to run but in addition its working life is very likely to be shortened.

HVAC systems can contain hundreds and for some commercial properties even thousands of square feet of ducting. It is not just dust that can build up in the ducting, however. Pollen, dirt, hair, dead insects and even dead mice can all add to a lessening in efficiency. In addition to these problems, another factor is mold. If moisture is present which it often is in high humidity areas, then mold and mold spores can be a very real health hazard. Regular cleaning by a certified furnace contractor can help prevent such issues becoming a major problem.

Steve Delaney, a spokesperson for Furnace repair Mississauga, said, "If a homeowner or a business owner wants to lower their running costs and extend the life of their HVAC system then it is vital that regular cleaning takes place. For most systems we would recommend cleaning every two or three years but if there are other factors present like allergy sufferers or smokers then it may be prudent to clean every year."

Once a homeowner or business owner has decided to have an inspection, Furnace Repair Mississauga will send two NADCA (National Air Duct Cleaners Association) certified ASCS (Air Systems Cleaning Specialist) technicians who will inspect the HVAC system and assess exactly what needs to be done. This inspection will be carried out with the appropriate use of infrared imaging cameras, snake cameras, and digital cameras. Should the assessment indicate that cleaning is required, then the process will move forward.

All return and supply vents will be pre-cleaned, and any dirt or debris will be removed with a vacuum collection device. Caked on debris will be removed using various agitation tools and techniques and should access holes be needed to facilitate any of these processes they will be plugged and sealed to industry standards.

Mr. Delaney went on to say, "We not only take pictures before and after the work is done, but we also take particulate readings before and after as well. That way a customer can clearly see the improvements to their HVAC system. Our aim is to leave any system we service cleaner than it was before."
