Monarch Environmental, based in Capistrano Beach, California, has announced that Company President Matt Davenport has recently promoted himself to Chief Encouragement Officer. He points out that this promotion is designed to emphasize the fact that he loves to encourage and push others so that they can be their absolute best. Monarch Environment is in the business of providing landscape design consulting, water management consulting, contract management consulting, consulting services from an ISA certified arborist, landscape inspections and assessments, resource management consulting, and new development consulting.

Matt Davenport himself says, "Being the owner of any business big or small has its advantages and disadvantages. Some of the advantages can be a lot of fun. As the owner, you are given the freedom to design a logo, lead a team, create a vision, rebrand, be creative and so much more. Another huge advantage is the fact that you can promote yourself at any time! Therefore, I'm promoting myself today to Chief Encouragement Officer effective immediately."

He continues, "This promotion really does not have anything to do with COVID-19. However, I must say the virus has highlighted the fact that I truly enjoy encouraging and pushing others to be their absolute best. Being raised by a pastor is partly the reason I often see more in other people than they see in themselves. This new title is somewhat kitschy I know. The aim is not marketing, it's more about defining one of my key roles in a growing business and an ever-changing world." One of their primary services is landscape design in Orange County. Because of their deep understanding of water and maintenance, they are able to offer a unique approach to the design of outstanding landscapes in Southern California. For landscape design, they offer plant palettes, master planning, CAD design, digital imaging, construction plans, schematic drawings, value engineering, and assessments.

They also offer water management consulting services, which actually boils down to ensuring that the plants are healthy by providing the water that they require at the right time. Monarch Environment offers water management and as part of this, their staff can provide irrigation assessments that determine current usage and compare this to a custom-built suggested water budget. They want to point out that most landscapes are overwatered by as much as 20 to 30 percent. Their ability to suggest and manage smart timers, including leading-edge smart water technologies and products have been proven to offer excellent results for clients. As part of their water management consulting services, they offer water management, water consumption data collection and reporting, water audits, water budgets, grant writing and rebate assistance, and a master plan for irrigation retrofit.

They also provide ISA certified arborist consulting services. This is essential because tree management is usually the most overlooked element of the landscape. These ISA certified arborists will utilize a targeted approach to tree maintenance with the result of having a healthy urban forest but with a more streamlined budget. The arborist consulting service has various components, such as arborist reports, tree hazard assessments, expert witness, tree inventory, GPS tree inventory services, GIS tree mapping, assessments of tree maintenance requirements, and TRAQ certification.

Monarch Environmental also offers advisory services for contract management and project management. They are able to excel in this kind of service through the use of technology to evaluate trends and forecast success. Their team of landscape experts has already overseen tens of millions of dollars in landscape master planning, renovation, and installation. Leveraging their experience, the team of experts is capable of ensuring that the client is able to get the most out of the landscape. They also provide custom and easy to use web interfaces that allow clients to monitor reports and online data at any time.
