All Clean Air Duct Cleaning has just revealed the secret as to why their customers are so satisfied with their HVAC duct cleaning services. They say the secret lies in the combination of having advanced equipment and experienced personnel to operate it. Those at the company say there is only one sure way to get air ducts in a home as clean as possible and that's by properly using a negative air machine like the crews at All Clean Air Duct Cleaning use.

Daryl Olsen, the company proprietor, talked about the need for HVAC ductwork to be cleaned with advanced equipment by saying, "There has been more than one way developed to attempt to clean air ducts in a home but based on our experience there is only one right way. That's by using a sophisticated negative air machine to create extreme suction inside the ductwork. Just using a rotary brush tool alone simply does not cut it. That's because it's usually not possible to reach all of the ductwork on an HVAC system with it and it's hard to get out all of the debris that the rotary brush knocks off the walls of the air ducts. That's why using high suction and a rotary brush tool like we do is the absolute best way to clean HVAC ductwork."

Olsen went on to say that the negative air machines that they use are so large they have to be mounted on a service vehicle. He also said these machines are powerful enough that they can generate between 2000-3000 CFM of air movement when the system is hooked up and running. It also helps that the crews at All Clean Air Duct Cleaning know exactly where to hook-up the suction hoses on the air duct system to have the maximum impact. The company owner says they can even shut down adjacent air duct sections if they feel they need more suction on a section of ductwork that they are cleaning. The company owner also went on to mention some of the important reasons why air duct cleaning should be done yearly. He started by saying that air inside a home is up to five times more polluted than the air outside of a home. A majority of this inside air will also pass through an HVAC system's ductwork several times in a single day. Olsen says there is a big difference in the quality of the air that comes out of clean HVAC ductwork as opposed to air ducts where cleaning has been neglected for a long time. He added that a homeowner definitely wants the higher quality air that comes out of clean ductwork. This cleaner air will have fewer allergens, pet dander, dust, and other contaminants. The company owner stated that by cleaning ductwork it also creates a slicker surface on the walls of the air ducts. He says this makes it harder for dust and other airborne contaminants to stick to the walls of the ductwork.

Olsen also warned people to be wary of companies that use inferior air duct cleaning methods but charge the same as companies that use advanced air duct cleaning equipment like his. He mentioned that there are also bait and switch air duct cleaning companies out there they advertise an extremely low price for their services and then hit the customer with add-ons when at the job. That's why it's recommended that a customer know exactly what they are getting for a price that was quoted to them over the phone. The company says that he has also heard of air duct cleaning companies that say they can get the job done in less than 2 hours. He cautioned that it takes approximately 4 hours to do a thorough air duct cleaning job on an average-size home.
