Imperial Crane Services, Inc, based in Chicago, Illinois, has announced that they are helping companies buy a crane in Chicago. This crane and equipment company was established in 1969 and is considered to be one of the biggest crane sales and rental companies worldwide. They also offer crane rental services, which is a vital service for construction companies that can?t afford to purchase cranes or only need to use a particular type of crane for a specific job.

Gina Kaktis, Marketing Director at Imperial Crane Services, Inc, says, ?Whether you are looking for new cranes or used equipment, Imperial Crane Sales has a variety of quality machines that will meet your lifting needs. Buying a crane, whether new or used, is advisable for construction companies that need the crane regularly. But for those who can't afford to buy or don't really need the crane on a regular basis, they can simply lease or rent. We also specialize in aerial work platforms, telescopic forklifts, construction hoists, and boom trucks.?

Imperial Crane Services also offers telehandlers, a revolutionary four-in-one rotating forklift. These are also known telescopic handlers, teleporters, reach forklifts, or boom lifts. Just like forklifts, they are used to lift and move loads to and from places that cannot be reached by conventional forklifts. For instance, telehandlers can be used to transfer palletized caro from a trailer to rooftops and other high places. Ordinarily, cranes are used to lift cargo to high places, such as the roof or the top of a building but cranes are not as practical or efficient as telehandlers for such tasks.

Examples of available cranes for sale from Imperial Crane Services include the 2008 Grove GMK7550 fully equipped crane with mega-wing attachment and eighth axle option; 2010 Link-Belt RTC-8050 II 50 ton rough terrain crane with 110-ft main boom, 51-ft bifold jib, two winches, heat & A/, block and ball; 1998 Liebherrr LTM 1400 500 ton fully equipped crane; 2008 Grove GMK7550 fully equipped crane with eighth axle, mega-wing full luffing jib, and all blocks and ball; and 2012 Liebherr LTM 1500 600 ton crane.

For those looking for crane rental in Michigan, Imperial Crane Services offers various cranes for rent. These cranes are suitable for major construction projects and for moving heavy goods. They will also get involved in the decision making process when selecting cranes because choosing the wrong kind of crane or hauling equipment can have a serious impact on the business. This is due to safety reasons, unnecessary expenses, and substantial work backlog. Imperial Crane Services will be involved from start to completion of the project to ensure that each client has the best crane option based on the work to be done and safety issues.

They also want to point out that crane rental is the better choice because of the high costs of construction crane sales in Michigan. And knowing what is required for a particular project, including the crane features, sizes, and operations, can help in selecting the equipment most suitable for the completion of the job.

Various types of cranes are available for rental. These include all terrain cranes, hydraulic truck cranes, conventional truck cranes, conventional lattice boom truck crane, crawler cranes, boom truck cranes, carrydeck cranes, aerial lifts, telehandlers, and construction hoists.

Examples of all terrain cranes for rent are the 2008 Grove GMK7550 and the 1998 Liebherr LTM1400 500 ton crane. Examples of boom truck cranes for rent are the 2014 Elliott 1870F boom truck on Peterbilt truck and the 2015 Elliott 40142R boom truck mounted on Peterbilt 365 truck. An example of a hydraulic truck crane for rent is the 2003 Terex T-340 with new Cummins Engine, four new outrigger cylinders, rebuilt boom cylinder brakes, winch, and new paint.

Those who are interested in the crane sales and rental services offered by Imperial Crane Services, including emergency crane services, may want to check out their website, or contact them on the telephone or through email.
