May 22, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

The Los Angeles TV Mounting Company, Audiovideoking - TV Installation and Home Theater, located at 7119 West Sunset Blvd, Los Angeles, CA 90046, announced the launch of their Same Day Services. The addition of the new service is in response to the many families who are practicing social distancing and staying within the safety of their homes as much as possible.

According to the company's business website, Same Day TV Mounting service starts as low as $99 and the purchase of the TV Brackets starts at $49. More information about the service can be found here: <https://audio-video-king-home-theater-tv.business.site/>

When considering adding a new flat-screen television in a home, it may be less expensive to go with a wall mount rather than a costly home entertainment center. Wall mounting a TV offers the benefit of saving valuable floor space in a home or apartment. In addition, with the assortment of wall mounting frames and their adjustment capabilities wall-mounted televisions can be viewed from many different angles. It can provide much more flexibility than a TV being placed on a floor. Wall-mounted TVs can be used as the focal point of a room and give a sleek and modern finish. The wires can be kept out of sight, making the room less cluttered, and reduce potential tripping hazards.

Those who are the type that likes to do it themselves may get the urge to go it alone. However, there are many reasons a professional should be called in for the job of a TV wall mount.

Some reasons to hire a professional TV installation service are:

Prevent Damage to Walls or TV

While the homeowner will definitely be careful when trying to do the wall installation, professional TV installers do this kind of thing regularly. It is almost second nature to them. They have the experience and know what to look out for when doing the job. Professional TV wall installers are also sure to have the right tools to complete the job. Having the right tools means everything when wall mounting TVs. The experts have tools such as stud sensors to find the perfect place behind your walls to drill and anchor a wall-mounting unit. They will have a measuring tape on hand, a level, and plastic coverings to catch any mess from dust or debris they create while working. The pros save time and prevent unnecessary damage to property that can cost a hefty price to repair.

TV Mounting Requires Additional Help

Wall mounting a TV is not a job for one person. While there have been many technological advances made with flat-screen TVs, they can still be too difficult for one person to lift and manage. Lifting the TV is not the only concern. The TV, at some point will need to be held into place while another person works on securing it on the wall or on the bracket. One person cannot do both at the same time. Extra hands would be needed to prevent dropping the TV and potentially hurting someone. Safety is always a priority during a TV wall mount installation job. Something professional TV wall mounting service providers always keep top of mind.

TV Mounting is Done Correctly the First Time

The last thing anyone would want is to have to re-mount the TV because something was done incorrectly. Mistakes such as an incorrect measurement, some screws not placed in exactly into the wall stud, and the TV ends up not tightly secured to the wall. Any host of things could go wrong if professionals were not there at the beginning of the job. Prevent the waste of time by working with TV Mounting specialists at the start.

Company owner, George Saroj, having been in the home theater and security camera business for over 10 years stated, "We recognize these are very unusual times. With more people staying at home and practicing social distancing we believe our services are needed more than ever now."
