Daniel Hartnett, who runs The Corporatethief Beats website, says, ?While trap sound in hip hop music was not always a commercial and radio-friendly sound, the story is quite different today. Through the hard work of some of the significant pioneers of trap beats, such as Lex Luger, Shawty Redd and Zaytoven and Southside 808 Mafia, how we perceive trap sounds has completely changed.?

He continues, ?When Lex Luger and Zaytoven began making trap beats in the early 2000s, the sound was very harsh and aggressive because these beats tended to use a lot of brass and orchestral sounds. Today, it has transformed into something that still maintains its unique identity and its original roots but is also something that is much more widespread. This means that trap sounds are now a favourite of both established and aspiring artists to work with. At The Corporatethief Beats, we provide a variety of excellent trap beats that can inspire and innovate musicians who are looking for new sounds.?

Originating in the 1990s, trap music is a subgenre of hip hop music that makes heavy use of synthesized drums and is characterized by complex hi-hat patterns, tuned kick drums with a long decay (originally from the Roland TR-808 drum machine), atmospheric synths, and an often melancholy or dark ambience and lyrical content. It utilizes instruments ranging from piano, strings, orchestras, choirs and leads to snare drums and double-or tripled-timed hi-hats. More information about trap beats, along with samples of a variety of trap beats produced by The Corporatethief Beats, can be found at the following link: https://www.TheCorporatethiefBeats.com/trap-beats/.

In addition to providing a variety of beats for music makers to make use of, The Corporatethief Beats also provides useful marketing advice to help up and coming rappers to promote their music online. On the Corporatethief Beats website, Hartnett states, ?This blog is aimed at helping you increase the number of visitors to your music. To help you learn and grow with the aid of my online marketing experience. This is my music marketing guide for rap artists. To show you the essential tools and techniques. These tools and tips will help you get the best outcome from the promotion of your mixtape, album or single online.?

The website also maintains a curated list of resources that will be helpful for rap artists who are looking to make their presence known. The list contains everything from excellent web hosting services, guides to help improve their music skills, tools and software to make beats with, social media promotion tools, SEO tools and more.

Hartnett?s own career in professional music production began at the Galway Technical Institute where he studied live sound engineering and music production. It is at Galway where he got his first taste of Logic Pro X, which he now uses for 95% of the hip hop beats he produces. After that, he continued his music production education at The Academy of Sound Dublin where he graduated with a Higher Diploma in Music Production and Sound Engineering. At the same time, Hartnett studied Digital Marketing at Dublin Business School and received a Diploma In Digital Marketing. He started The Corporatethief Beats website back in 2010 to showcase his beats and share everything he learned throughout his career and education with his fellow music makers.
