James Collins from Pool Biz Authority LLC says, "We're the only site that offers a compilation of pool route listings from all pool brokers from various states. Our listings can save you the trouble of having to check out other online sources that require due diligence, going to your local pool supply distributor and checking their bulletin boards, or asking people in the pool industry for reputable route owners who are looking for quick cash."

After locating a pool route that appears to be suitable, it is a good idea to meet with the seller. A good question to ask is whether one is comfortable with learning from that person about the business. If not, it would be advisable to look for another pool route. It is vital to ensure that one is confident learning all that has to be learned from the seller before completing the purchase.

There are a number of suggested questions to ask the pool route seller. First of all, it is vital to ask how long the seller has been in the business. Second, it is also recommended to ask how many accounts the seller will have left after selling that particular route. If the seller still has several accounts left and is actually only selling a few of his or her accounts, that should be taken as a good indicator. And it may also be a good idea to inquire about some of the other revenue streams within the business other than just providing service. Another important factor to consider when buying a particular pool route is how close the homes are within the route. This is because it is essential to determine how much time will be spent driving from pool to pool. The closer the pools are, the more pools can be serviced and the more money can be made.

It is also recommended to ask how long the seller has been servicing those accounts and their payment history. The length of time is a good indicator that they will remain loyal and continue to use the services to be provided by the buyer of the pool route. And even more important is the payment service because it is obviously not a good idea to buy delinquent accounts or those that need a lot of work to collect payment from.

After asking a number of questions, the buyer will have a good idea of the kind of person the seller is and the specific pool route that is being offered for sale. The next step is to negotiate a price that is in accordance with the budget and then set a closing date. When working with a broker, it is a good idea to place a certain percentage of the amount in escrow as a protection for the buyer in case there may be problems during the transfer of accounts.

After the closing, the buyer starts to undergo the necessary training from the seller. It is advisable to ask a lot of questions to optimize the opportunity to really learn about the business from someone who has already done it for a certain period of time.
