August 26, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Web Marketingville, a Cincinnati, Ohio based company, recently announced a new technique, developed specifically for eye care professionals, that will assist them in gaining more patients and increasing their market share. This marketing firm concentrates on the local business community, bringing leads to the eye care professional by applying various proprietary strategies.

With the introduction of its Local Buzz Connect Program, Web Marketingville has made it possible to go after those patients who are most desirable to the eye care professional and bring in more leads to the practice.

Several studies have shown that over 85% of those searching for online products and services will first go on to the internet to confirm the credibility and reputation of a local business. This is done before they will commit to purchasing from that particular establishment. Patient reviews, trust, and authority in the industry are the key elements that these potential patients look for, and the key elements in getting those patients to commit to local establishments.

Ken Geers, spokesperson for Web Marketingville, recently commented on the new service offering, saying that "This is a tremendous opportunity for the local eye care professional. We've done our research and come up with a strategy that is sure to help significantly raise market share."

By recognizing the importance of high quality reviews from patients, and overall trust and authority of the eye care practice, Web Marketingville, through its Local Buzz Connect Program, addresses all three of those key patient concerns.

Web Marketingville works with each unique eye care professional, developing a strategic plan that over a short time is expected to bring in more patients and continues to add to that increase as the months and even years go by.

"If your eye care practice is ready for a boost in leads, visit Local Buzz Connect Eye Care Strategy and begin the process," says Ken Geers.

Web Marketingville offers a number of online services for businesses of all types, focusing on the individual needs of those businesses as opposed to cookie cutter solutions. For more information about the company, or the range of services that they offer, visit their official website.
