Foundation Repair Company Navigates Through Red Tape To Get Work Done

Unlimited Drilling Company works to answer the needs of San Diego?s mudslides after record rainfall.

Unlimited Drilling, a San Diego foundation company, answered numerous calls for help after the last month?s record rainfall. The engineering and general contracting company provided concrete retaining walls, steel beam, and pipe pile retaining walls to stabilize the slope sites. Unlimited Drilling has been working to stabilize slopes, control erosion, and fix drainage systems over 27 years. They are actively working with insurance companies, attorneys, and city districts to push through paperwork to get work done in an accelerated manner.

San Diego?s record rainfall in April, much of it in a short period, led to flooding and landslides. Even without the record rainfall, moderate rain in heavily compacted soil or improperly graded can cause flooding. Poor drainage also contributed to flooding and landslides. Hillsides typically solid slid down, creating mudslides onto roads and private property.

The closure on March 19, due to Covid-19, has not affected Unlimited Drilling. They are considered an essential business as they are critical in the infrastructure of a city. Slope stability is vital for flood protection systems. Retaining walls use blocks strategically placed to resist the movement of sliding soil. When a property is damaged from the recent rainfall, Unlimited worked with legal firms and insurance companies, all ensuring any permits that were needed by the city were quickly approved for work to begin before more damage could occur.

?I was glad San Diego turned to Unlimited Drilling and Foundation Inc., to meet their slope stabilization needs,? says Joe Azar, owner of Unlimited Drilling. ?We pride ourselves in doing the job right the first time fora very competitive price.?
