June 02, 2020

June 02, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Restoration Logistics today reflected on its release of basement and sewage cleanup. Denver residents now have a customer-focused service which was in development for approximately 1 year. The main aim was to protect people with high safety standards by utilizing the same standards used in water treatment facilities. And by taking the needs of customers to heart, this pro-microbial soil and structure treatment does so with the health and safety as a top priority.

Dan Travers, Emergency Services Manager at Restoration Logistics, says: "We wanted to try something new in Denver, basement and sewage cleanup service focused on the customer's comfort. Anyone familiar with this market will probably have noticed how other companies seemed to use an antimicrobial that is caustic and in many instances gives poor and unwanted results. We felt this was a problem because with the evolution of our industry, we provide better outcomes for all property owners at lower costs. So as a welcome breath of fresh air we give results that completes the job with nothing left out. Restoration Logistics chose to make this move because we're an ethical company that cares about our customers."

Dan Travers also said, "We want to give our customers options. With basement and crawl space sewage services, they have a fresh new reliable service in Denver now. We want them to feel comfortable when working with our integrity-focused team. Looking to past successes, with previous offerings, we're looking forward to helping customers in Denver with basement and sewage cleanup jobs."

Restoration Logistics has been in business for 33 years, being established in 1986. Since Day 1 it has always aimed to stand out from the crowd, while also providing its customers the best possible experience at the best possible value.
