Projects by Design, the Best Agile Training Company in Bluffton, SC, is highlighting the importance of informal learning in the workplace through its free online courses.

Informal learning is the opposite of formal and structured classroom education. It comes in the form of video, written, coaching sessions, or chat rooms. Nowadays, even businesses also use informal learning platforms to help increase employee engagement. This type of learning tool allows employees to keep learning and growing without leaving their work.

To provide informal learning to businesses and IT teams in South Carolina, Projects by Design is offering two online courses that can be accessed for free. These courses are available on the company's official website, <https://projectsbydesign.net/>.

One course tackles the benefit of project canvas, an innovative tool used to transform an idea into a plan. The online lessons discuss ways to kick start a project with a project canvas that can engage the team members of a business. The online learning tool will also help team members start projects with a clear understanding of the work ahead for them.

The Best IT Project Management Training in Bluffton, SC, is also providing a special course on effective Agile implementation. Project team members who enroll in the class can learn the four key components of an effective Agile Framework implementation strategy.

Aside from the two, the professional consulting company added a free course on how to use Tuckman's Ladder. It is a new online team development strategy intended to help businesses build a more robust team composition. All these courses are offered for free and can be accessed online by registering for Projects by Design.
