Los Angeles, California based The Net Lender (TNL) is reaching out to the community to announce that they will continue offering financial support to COVID-19 patients over the course of the pandemic. Information on the local company can be found here: thenetlender.com/.

With the economy reopening in LA County and activities returning to a state somewhat near normalcy, the future looks set to improve for local residents who did not like having to stay in isolation. Churches, hair salons, restaurants and shops have all been allowed to reopen, and while it all seems like good news, the impact that this will have on the spread of COVID-19 in the area is yet to be seen. All predictions seem to point to a significant increase in the transmission rate of the infectious disease, which had reached an all-time low after the stay-at-home order was announced.

In an official statement, Director of Health Services for LA County Dr. Christina Ghaly shares, ?While we don?t know precisely yet how reopening and associated recovery activities will affect the transmission of COVID-19, it does appear to be greater than it was, and slightly uptrending. If transmission has indeed increased, then the model predicts that we will have a continued increase in hospital patient volume over the next two to four weeks, and we would anticipate beginning to see that change happen over the coming one to two weeks.?

This increase in hospitalizations for COVID-19 patients comes as worrying news for LA as many residents had found themselves struggling to keep up with their expenses and would not be able to pay medical bills if they were to get sick. A representative of TNL says, ?We want to assure the community that we will continue to look after them, and they can rely on us even in the most dire of circumstances. We?ll be offering special support to COVID-19 patients, handling the requests of those who need financial assistance to cover their medical expenses with special consideration. Together, we can get through this, and there is no better time than now to show our beloved community our support and appreciation.?

TNL states that their application and acceptance process will remain mostly the same as it has always been, with the main and most demanding requisite for applicants being the possession of an eligible, lien-free vehicle in their name. With this in hand along with proof of income, a driver's license and proof of insurance, any California resident can apply for a cash advance of up to $50,000. Provided that everything is in order and no other issues are present, applicants can receive the agreed upon amount of money within 24 hours of their application, allowing them to tend to even the most pressing of financial emergencies. ?We offer financial support to those in need at the best, most competitive rates in the market,? says a representative of TNL. ?We have simplified our entire process, guaranteeing that anyone can rely on us regardless of their situation, amount needed or bad credit. Reach out to us, and we?ll work out a way to help you out with clear and straightforward terms.?

TNL possesses several customer reviews that attest to the high quality of their services. One of their most recent testimonials, written by Jeremiah Lutes and highlighted on their website, says, ?I am the head of the household and I know of the pressure one can get from bills and discrepancies in their credit. I used the car I bought before I got married, and it turned out to be such a lifesaver for me. I took out about half of what I was offered and wasn?t pressured any further. Thank you, and hopefully my car will be eligible again if need be.?
