June 17, 2020 -
Austin, Texas based Jack Buys Austin Houses is reaching out to the community to share advice and information on how to sell a local house quickly.

Through their latest article, shared on their website, the local company demonstrates their expertise and extends a helping hand to the community, outlining the factors to consider and prepare for when looking to quickly sell a property. Their article, titled 5 Things You Should Do To Sell Your House Fast In Austin, touches upon the most important parts of the home sales process, offering advice and guidance on how to overcome the various challenges that inevitably arise when selling an Austin house.

Deylia Rady of Jack Buys Austin Houses says, "Most people think 'I want to sell my house fast,' without any consideration for the difficulties and challenges that accompany this task. Going through the home-sale process is not an easy task, and if you want to be done with it quickly, there are several obstacles that you need to prepare for."

The local real estate experts share that the first thing homeowners need to do to speed up the sale of their property is to get a realistic estimate for the price of their house. Spending some time researching comparable sales in the close area is the best way to get an appropriate estimate for a house's price, though the company notes that some aspects, such as repairs, housing demand and taxes, can greatly affect a house's value. An unrealistically high asking price can discourage prospective buyers from making a bid on the property.

Once a fair price has been set for the property, the next thing that homeowners can do to speed up the sale process is to make affordable and necessary upgrades and improvements to the property's aesthetic. Even if it is just thorough cleaning, an aesthetically pleasing and organized environment is more likely to catch a buyer's attention, helping them envision their future on the property and encouraging them to make an offer.

This ties in with the company's next piece of advice, as they state that, once these improvements are set, the next thing on the schedule is to showcase the property. Hosting an open house is the best way to do this, encouraging local real estate professionals to visit the house in hopes that it will meet the criteria of one of their clients. If a real estate professional is out searching for client houses, this means that their clients are pre-approved and ready for a quick sale. Rady says, "If you have any kind of connections with real estate professionals or professionals of related fields, such as pool cleaners, property inspectors or contractors, you may want to reach out to them and ask for help promoting your property. These connections have access to a large word of mouth database made of the customers they do business with and can mention your property to them. This works even if you are not a real estate investor, as you only need to tell all of your friends and family that your house is on the market."

Even after going through all of this effort to sell a property, these can still spend a few months on the market. For those looking to sell their property in the fastest way possible, Jack Buys Austin Houses states, "We buy houses in Austin in any condition, with all-cash offers and fast closing times. We'll present you a fair, all-cash offer for the property along with a closing date, and clear contract terms. Once the paperwork is done, we'll reach out to you again, signing and finishing the sale at a local title company. This frees you from having to pay a commission to a real estate agent or having to wait for months without any assurance that you'll actually sell your property. We are real estate investors and are always looking for new opportunities, so you can just reach out to us anytime and we'll give you an offer for your house."
