Duluth Car Accident Chiropractor Reveals Risks Of Car Accidents And Whiplash

June 19, 2020

DULUTH, GA - June 19, 2020 -
Duluth, Georgia based Arrowhead Clinic recently issued a public advisory explaining the risks posed by car accidents and, in particular, the dangers of whiplash. In fact, local statistics show that numerous car accidents occur on a daily basis in Duluth. In many of these cases, victims end up suffering from whiplash, which is one of the most common types of car accident injuries in the area.

As noted on the clinic?s website, whiplash is a casual descriptor for soft tissue injuries found in the neck. It is caused by overstretching the joints and muscles of the neck and upper back ligaments. If left untreated, it may result in chronic pain and develop into a more severe injury. The symptoms of whiplash include headaches, muscle spasms, numbness and tingling, and these issues tend to lay dormant for days or even weeks after the accident. This is why, more often than not, victims usually do not associate these symptoms with their accident.

Many people believe that their head has to be violently whipped back and forth to get whiplash but Dr. Davis Gentry, a Duluth car accident chiropractor with over 20 years of chiropractic experience, clarifies that this is not always the case. The severity of the injury really depends on how properly restrained in the vehicle a person is at the time of the accident. This is why there have been many cases where the victim of a car accident gets whiplash despite driving as slow as 5-10 miles per hour. Most minor fender benders are known to lead to whiplash. Additionally, it may also happen in slip and fall accidents as well as during high contact sports, such as football, boxing, or gymnastics.

Typically, mild whiplash injuries can heal within six to nine months with proper medical care but this is not true for all cases. In fact, more than 20% of victims who suffer from whiplash continue to experience pain or restricted movement even after two years following the accident. If a person does not find the right chiropractor and receive the appropriate medical care right away, the pain they are experiencing could lead to negative effects on their health and quality of life.

These are the reasons why seeking proper chiropractic help after being involved in a car accident is important, even if the person does not feel like they have sustained any injuries. Chiropractic care, for instance, focuses on the treatment of a person?s mechanical disorders within their musculoskeletal system, and it takes a skilled and experienced chiropractor to properly and effectively treat a person?s soft tissues, including neck muscles, to properly restore any lost range of motion. In fact, many people have found that this kind of treatment produces the quickest and most long-lasting positive results when it comes to auto accident injuries.
