As previously mentioned, Lift Plastic Surgery also offers non-surgical techniques, such as Emsculpt®, which makes use of a high-intensity focused electromagnetic energy for the purpose of inducing supramaximal muscle contractions. During each Emsculpt® session, the abdominal or gluteal muscles are stimulated and contract about 20,000 times, which is equivalent to 20,000 crunches or squats.

They also provide a broad range of non-surgical facial rejuvenation options, including injectables and Botox. These allow them to treat various kinds of skin conditions, such as wrinkles, volume loss, fine lines, and contour deformities. Botox is just one of the most extensively researched aesthetic treatments but it is the only approved prescription treatment for temporarily getting rid of moderate to severe frown lines between the brows crow?s feet.

Meanwhile, the double chin may be treated with non-surgical injections of Kybella. This treatment is approved for the neck but it has also been observed to also work on stubborn under arm/ bra fat. Its active ingredient is deoxycholic acid, a naturally occurring molecule in the body that helps in the breakdown and absorption of fat.

Juvederm and Juvederm Ultra are for treating moderate to severe facial wrinkles and folds.

There is also platelet-rich plasma (PRP), which is a substance obtained from the patient?s own blood to help in skin rejuvenation. It may be injected alone to help stimulate collagen production to fill in small quantities of missing volume. It can also be used in combination with fillers or fat to help stimulate the healing process and the retention of the volume replaced.
