Marietta Car Accident Chiropractor Releases Blog Post on Delayed Car Accident Symptoms After Accidents

June 19, 2020

Marietta, Georgia - June 19, 2020 -
Arrowhead Clinic in Marietta, Georgia, has announced that they have recently published a blog post that explains delayed car accident injury symptoms after accidents. People who get involved in a minor car accident usually don?t notice their symptoms immediately after the accident. This could be due to a number of reasons but the most common one is the rush of adrenaline right after the accident. The body?s production of endorphins and adrenaline are responsible for blocking the pain so that the body would be able to cope with the situation.

Dr. Valentina Adcock, chiropractor and spokesperson for Arrowhead Clinic in Marietta, says, ?It's important to know that even if you feel fine immediately following your car crash, that doesn't necessarily mean you are fine. When the release of adrenaline and endorphins finally subsides, the pain will quickly start to set in. The goal of our chiropractors in Marietta is to help you understand the importance of monitoring your symptoms and treating your injuries following a car accident. We want to help you restore your physical well-being as well as help you protect your legal rights so you can receive the compensation you deserve for your car accident injuries.?

There are a number of accident injury symptoms that may be delayed. These include blurry vision, headache, difficulty remembering information, inability to concentrate, clouded thinking, abnormal sleep patterns, lack of energy, dizziness, and nausea. Those who experience any of these signs after a car collision may have suffered a concussion. This is a severe injury and it is vital to seek medical attention immediately after experiencing any of the symptoms.

Another kind of injury that usually has delayed symptoms after a motor vehicle accident is soft tissue injury. This is an injury resulting from damage to the muscles, ligaments, or tendons. Typical symptoms of soft tissue injures include neck pain, back pain, whiplash, numbness, and shoulder pain. And the most notorious kind of soft tissue injury is whiplash, which results when the head is thrown back and forth during the car collision. The negative consequences of soft tissue injuries include pain, swelling, and limited range of mobility.

It is, therefore, essential for a car accident victim to consult with a car accident injury chiropractor regardless of current symptoms or injuries. The chiropractor may be able to diagnose any injuries that the victim has sustained in the accident before they become too serious and have lasting serious consequences. If there are no evident injuries or symptoms, the chiropractor can offer advice on how to monitor any potential symptoms and injuries to look out for.

It is also vital to consult with a doctor immediately following the car collision to be able to file an injury claim later. The insurance company will need documented proof from doctor visits to show that the accident indeed caused the injuries. Delaying consultation with a doctor or chiropractor may result in the insurance company denying the claim.

Arrowhead Clinic in Marietta offers a number of services. These include treatment for car/truck injuries, neck and back pain, slip and fall injuries, sports injuries, and workers? injuries. For those suffering from neck and back pain, the chiropractor will assess the spine as a whole, including other possible regions of the body that may also be affected. Their doctors may also provide advice on nutritional changes, posture, stress management, sleeping positions, and lifestyle goals.

To treat neck pain, the chiropractor will employ gentle adjustment methods with the goal of aligning the neck to support the head and body appropriately, thus relieving pain in the neck. For back pain, the chiropractor may use various kinds of treatment, including exercise, manual manipulation, transcutaneous electrical nerve stimulation, and warm or cold compresses. Other possible solutions for back pain include yoga, heat, mindfulness, physiotherapy, massage, and psychological therapies.
