McDonough Car Accident Chiropractor Discusses Injuries From Being In A Car Accident

June 22, 2020

McDonough, Georgia - June 22, 2020 -
Arrowhead Clinic, a practice located in McDonough, Georgia, is reaching out to help educate the general public about the different kinds of injuries caused by auto accidents. As noted on their website, Arrowhead Clinic believes that an auto collision causes both minor and major bodily injuries. In fact, roughly three out of ten road accidents can cause damage to the musculoskeletal system, which includes ligaments, nerves, tendons and blood vessels.

Car accidents may also result in head injuries that range from mild concussions to severe cerebral trauma. They may cause damage to the spine that can lead to full body paralysis. Other related injuries may include feet injuries, broken ribs, collapsed lungs and cardiac arrest. Auto accidents may also surpass physical harm. In fact, many car accident survivors experience post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), anxiety and depression.

Meanwhile, Dr. Robbyn Keating from Arrowhead Clinic points out that a common kind of injury named whiplash is often overlooked by many car accident survivors. Whiplash takes place when there is a severe jerk to the neck which causes it to move back and forth beyond its usual range. As a result, neck muscles, ligaments and tendons are strained and overstretched. Whiplash is usually caused by rear-end collisions, regardless of the velocity of the clashing vehicles. It may also be caused by slip-and-fall and contact sports accidents. When whiplash is not treated, it may result in chronic pain and cause permanent damage in the whole neck and spine.

Arrowhead Clinic reminds victims of car accidents to immediately treat their injury regardless of how mild the symptom is. They urge them to visit their local car accident chiropractors, as they know how to properly realign the damaged joints and ease the pain of the body organs affected. This kind of care is non-invasive since no medical tools are introduced to the affected parts. It also does not require surgery, pain medications or other addictive substances. Moreover, chiropractors are able to treat injuries in the neck, back, head and spine in addition to whiplash, sprains and strains in soft tissues.

Arrowhead Clinic warns that failure to respond to these injuries at once may cause further complications, such as chronic pain and the disconnection of muscles, ligaments, and tendons from major body organs and systems. Learn more here: Car Accident Chiropractor Near Me.

The practice relies primarily on holistic and natural treatments. Unlike traditional methods that require patients to spend a lot of money on drugs just to ease the pain, the clinic?s chiropractors solely cure the pain through the power of hands at a much more affordable price. Their staff will also provide emotional support and even practical advice in order to avoid car accidents in the future. Moreover, they will help victims of car accidents seek redress for the damages done through coordination with lawyers and insurance agents in charge of dealing with the medical bills.

Dr. Keating further explains that the Arrowhead Clinic?s treatment process involves a free consultation for first timers where they will be asked about their past involvement in auto accidents. Afterwards, they may proceed to request for a physical examination involving full body evaluation, x-rays, as well as pain and joint testing. Upon careful evaluation, patients will be prescribed with the best possible therapy method which may include physical therapy, electrical stimulation, and spinal decomposition in order to relieve the pain.
