Ram Mizrahi from On Time Garage Door Repair says, ?The garage door is the main door that grants access to your property, and so having a properly functioning garage door is very important. It is crucial that your garage door is functioning properly so that your loved ones are safe.?

He continues, ?An ill functioning garage door is like an open door and offers no safety. If the garage door at your house is broken or needs a repair, it should be attended at the earliest. It is like an open invitation to the various intruders. It can be a major cause of all unwanted accidents. So, if you want the safety of everyone at your home and want to keep the belongings safe then it is good to get our residential garage door repair services.?

On Time Garage Door Repair provides a number of services. These include an on-site diagnostic; emergence repair service; garage door broken spring repair; garage door off track repair; garage door won?t open; garage door won?t close; garage door opener repair; garage door opener installation; damaged garage door panels; broken garage door rollers; broken garage door cables; and garage door remote / keypad repair or installation. More information about these services can be gleaned from their site at https://sites.google.com/site/garagedoorcompanynearme.

There are a number of issues related to garage doors that may need to be addressed. First, the garage door may already be old such that it now requires appropriate servicing in order to function like new again. Second, a broken spring on the garage door may need to be replaced. These springs are vital components of any garage door and need to be working properly or else the garage door may become a safety risk for family members. Third, the cables for the garage door may have already rusted or are no longer functioning like before. Fourth, the safety sensors may be misaligned, which means that they are unable to provide the safety that is required. These are just some of the common issues with a garage door.

Ram Mizrahi says, ?Unless you?ve got proper knowledge and training, you shouldn?t try to repair or replace your garage door springs yourself. It?s a dangerous process because of the high pressure that the springs are under. Continuing to operate your overhead garage door with springs that have broken is extremely dangerous and it may cause serious damage to your door if not taken care of immediately.?

It is important to note that the garage door springs have a certain number of cycles before they fail. They are usually expected to last for 10,000 cycles, which translates to around five to seven years for the majority of household use. These springs tend to break while the door is moving or in the elevated position, so it is advisable never to walk under a garage door that is moving.
