Battle Born Painting has just recently published a new blog on its website that discusses how a fresh coat of paint can affordably improve the curb appeal of any home. In the blog, this reputable Reno, NV painting contractor talks about how a home's exterior finish is the biggest factor in making any overall home setting look much more attractive. The article says that this remains true no matter how many fancy landscaping features, lighting, or sidewalk and driveway enhancements an owner makes to their property. The blog also pointed out that there is still plenty of good weather left to get the job done before the fall rainy season arrives.

Company owner Will Reyes says, "As you go through the summer you may be noticing that the exterior of your home is missing a little pizzazz. Most of the time that means your home's exterior finish has become dull or outdated. Fortunately, we always have a remedy that will help greatly enhance your home's curb appeal. That's done by meticulously prepping your home's siding and then covering it with a fresh coat of high-quality paint. If you take the time to sit down and discuss this with us for just a few minutes, we can quickly enlighten you on how we can make your home's exterior stand out from those around it. That's why we took the time to write this new blog article that explains exactly how we do that.

In the new blog, it talks about how the company likes to go well beyond just painting the siding on a home to spruce up its exterior. The article says that it's also very important to consider painting the shutters, trim, exterior doors, and garage door of a home to make its exterior really come alive. It was also mentioned that the crews at the company use superior painting techniques, top-of-the-line equipment, and quality paint to make the final home painting product turn out looking great. The article went on to explain that painting a home does not just improve a home's curb appeal either. It says that for those that are about to put their home on the market, a fresh coat of paint will also make their home more desirable to prospective buyers. Painting also increases the market value of a home on average 2-5%. The article went on to state that many times a home's value is increased enough by painting, that it will cover the cost of getting that work done and more. The blog post also said that a new coat of paint will better protect a home's siding from the effects of weather, the sun's UV rays, and the problems that bug infestations often cause. All of these things will help to increase the lifespan of any home's siding.

Battle Born's home painting's services are also highly thought of by those that have used them. Evidence of this can be found in the large number of 5 out of 5-star reviews they have received on their Google Maps Listing. In one of those reviews, Jean Allen wrote, "We could not be happier. Battle Born finished up painting our house and staining our fence about 1/2 hour ago. They did an amazing job; our house looks wonderful! They were on time, professional, personable, and friendly. They worked quickly but with total attention to detail. Will, Kristen, and the whole crew - thank you so much for a job well done! I highly recommend Battle Born!"

Reyes also wanted to mention that in addition to enhancing the looks of home exteriors, they are also specialists when it comes to cabinet painting, exterior painting, floor resurfacing, commercial painting, and deck and fence staining.
