They want to advise homeowners that it is important to determine whether a simple roof repair or roof replacement may be required. There are a number of signs to look for to determine whether roof replacement is needed.

First of all, if the roof is more than 20 years old, it may likely need to be replaced. Missing shingles may also be an indicator. There could be missing shingles in various areas of the roof, such as the valleys. The valleys are a key area of the roof because this is where rain and snow flows down to the gutters. Missing or defective shingles in the valleys may result into roof leaks.

Another possible indicator would be twisted and folded shingles. It is also a good idea to check the chimney flashings because if these are filled with tar or roof cement, the roof may already need to be replaced. Also, if the gutters are filled with shingle granules, this is an indication that the shingles are deteriorating and the roof may have to be replaced.
