August 11, 2020 -
Chicago, IL based Crane Network LLC is pleased to share that they now have a new batch of cranes for rent on their platform. Following the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic, the company has been taking steps to ensure that their clients may still retain access to the crucial equipment and machinery they need, even if they are forced to account for tighter budgetary requirements.

?As everyone has come to realize, these are unprecedented times,? says Crane Network LLC, ?and with such times come unprecedented challenges. Given the prevailing need for new safety measures and similar constraints on the previously well-oiled workflow of the construction industry, projects around the country have to be approached from new and innovative angles in order to ensure a successful compromise between the health of our workers as well as overall productivity. However, we believe that this simply means we need to use an old solution to help deal with this new problem.?

The solution, according to the company, lies in renting equipment rather than buying it outright. Crane Network LLC recognizes the fact that the end of the pandemic may be several months away, if not longer, and experts around the world are coming to the conclusion that its effects will likely be felt for years (if not decades) to come. As a result, the company urges their clients to consider taking every possible step to protect their financial stability sooner rather than later.

They state, ?A crane is often a vital part of any project with significant investment. Many of our clients cannot afford to do without a crane as the absence of such machinery may push the culmination of the project far beyond a date they are able to sustain. In the same way, their ability to get jobs done with more expediency would make them more likely to win bigger projects in the future. The issue today is that such companies, particularly those that may not be considered the largest players in the industry, will be much more hard-pressed to find the funds they need to buy a crane. Fortunately, they will likely find what they need on our platform.?

Crane Network LLC offers a large and comprehensive variety of cranes, equipment and parts, which users may browse according to model, year, price, location and so on. For instance, a user may find replacement parts for machinery they already own, used boom trucks for sale and more in addition to cranes that are available for rent. Furthermore, the widespread adoption of their platform effectively means that cranes can be sourced for projects almost anywhere in the country, often cutting down drastically on transportation costs.

The same is true in reverse. Since Crane Network LLC primarily puts buyers and sellers in touch with each other, every user on their platform has direct access to other users who have the equipment they need. This means that sellers will often not have to attempt to entice buyers across great distances, making it more likely for a sale to take place in a suitable period. The platform allows sellers to launch their own advertising campaigns, giving them access to a much wider pool of potential buyers than if they were to attempt networking on their own.

The packages offered by Crane Network LLC have proven quite popular as well, thanks in large part to the generous advantages they provide as well as the variety of clients they are able to cater to, from those who wish to sell a single crane to others who are looking to sell in consistently greater numbers. The advantages include the ability to upload an unlimited number of photos (of the machinery being sold), access to relevant statistics, the lack of broker fees and so on.

Those who wish to learn how to sell a crane or rent other equipment on this platform are welcome to reach out to Ron Selby Jr. of Crane Network LLC to get started. More information can be found on the company?s website as well.
