Adfilic Releases Big Bass Capable Wireless Sound Speakers

September 02, 2015

September 02, 2015 -
Adfilic, a company based in British Columbia, Canada, has announced the release of their new Bluetooth speaker, capable of generating big bass sounds. James Chien, owner and CEO of Adfilic, released a comment about the company's newly released speakers. He states, "It comes with big bass and is loud. It's great for outdoors and great to bring with you to school. We timed our release as a back to school product launch, and just in time for the holiday shopping season, of course."

The speaker features an LED display that shows the currently playing radio station or music, volume, and the chosen mode of play, and features Bluetooth technology that will work with most consumer devices. But what makes it unique is that it is loud enough to be used outdoors. This makes it suitable for use on school grounds or even in the home's backyard for parties and the like.

Early reports show Bluetooth speakers to be among the most popular gifts for the upcoming 2015 holiday season, and for a number of reasons. "They're the perfect gift for everyone," says department store owner Ned L. "From pre-teens to senior citizens, everyone likes to listen to their favorite music, and because wireless speakers are so convenient, they're a great gift choice for anyone on your Holiday shopping list."

Bluetooth has been slowly gaining popularity since its inception in the mid-1990s. By allowing users to listen to their chosen music from phones, tablets, or other devices, without cords, they are as convenient as they are stylish. These are wireless speakers home owners would like to use. Today's tech savvy consumer doesn't put much stock in old fashioned stereos with side speakers. A Bluetooth wireless audio speaker is a much more convenient way to go but oftentimes these are not capable of producing loud sounds.

Adfilic has released their digital wireless speakers just in time for the holiday shopping season, which is when many consumers purchase Bluetooth speakers. During the Christmas 2014 season alone, retailers reported a combined millions of these speakers being sold, which makes them one of the most popular electronic accessories available.

Adfilic offers a variety of electronics and electronic accessories for sale. More about the company and their newly released Bluetooth stereo speakers can be seen on their official website, along with more specific information about the product.
