Rancho Cucamonga, Calif. ? As the coronavirus (COVID-19) sweeps the nation, it seems even essential businesses, such as plumbers, are having a hard time staying afloat. Drain Experts is a local company offering services in residential and commercial plumbing in Rancho Cucamonga, CA, and this month they are sharing the drastic effect the virus has taken on the plumbing industry across the state of California.

Overall, jobs in the maintenance and repair industry, in general, has decreased 16 percent since the onset of the pandemic in late February. While plumbers, like other industries, are taking precautions to keep technicians and clients safe, many have still canceled routine plumbing calls and maintenance. The cancellations come from both a lack of funds due to job losses and fear of the virus itself. The state of California has deemed plumbers an essential business throughout the pandemic, but the industry is continuing to see a decrease in call volume across the state.

Due to the slower business, many plumbers have had to reduce staff, forcing them to also provide customers with less availability. Even though lockdowns are lifting, it could still be a long time coming before the industry starts to regain momentum again. The plumbing industry will need to continue taking as many safety precautions as possible, such as social distancing and having technicians wear masks, doing their part in reducing the spread of COVID-19.
