August 26, 2020 -

Milton, FL ? Butler?s Auto Recycling, local auto dismantlers in Milton, were recently featured in the monthly newsletter for the Florida Auto Dismantlers & Recyclers Association (FADRA). The newsletter produced an article showcasing statements from local business owners within the auto recycling industry. These business owners explained how the effects of the coronavirus (COVID-19) have impacted operating procedures and customer interactions.

FADRA is one of the largest and most active auto recycling associations in the United States. They provide useful services to their members including political representation in Tallahassee, business information and education, and annual trade shows. Each quarter FADRA puts out a comprehensive newsletter highlighting business owners and updates within the industry. This month, Butler?s Auto Recycling was featured in an article showing how auto recycling businesses across Florida have dealt with the recent pandemic. Despite the hard times, Butler?s Auto has seen steady sales and even record numbers in eBay sales. Owner Jim Butler says, ?We?re blessed up here in the Panhandle; as of today (March 27), none of our team or their families have been affected. We have a few already working from home and we have been taking a few extra precautions.? The Milton recycled auto parts dealer has rearranged areas of their shop to promote social distancing. They are also taking steps to disinfect frequently touched surfaces as often as possible.

Butler?s Auto Recycling has been serving the Milton and surrounding communities since 1977. One of their top priorities is excellent customer service and safety for both customers and employees. They are committed to providing high-quality and low-cost auto parts to individuals and businesses in their area.
