

Music Producer CT Aletniq and Hip Hop Producer KTEK Collaborate to Record New Tracks at Recording Studios in Phoenix

August 31, 2020

Phoenix, Arizona - August 31, 2020 -
Phoenix Recording LLC, based in Tempe, Arizona, has announced that music producer CT Aletniq has recently joined forces with hip hop producer KTEK, from Atlanta, to record new tracks at the recording studios in Phoenix. The sessions resulted in the production of 5 new tracks that can be found at the website of The Grind Factory Studios. Lady Kane, who is one of KTEK?s female hip hop artists, was featured in one of the songs. CT Aletniq, the music producer in Phoenix, says, ?We continue an ongoing collaboration and KTEK plans another visit to my studio in Phoenix soon.?

As a music producer, CT Aletniq creates hip hop beats and remixes for artists from various parts of the world. He has more than 20 years of experience in the music industry and he has been instrumental in helping many upcoming artists create their own music. His goal is to help music artists make the necessary changes and adjustments to their recordings so that the resulting music will sound much better. He can also provide some advice on the different ways to market the music and artist to get the music to consumers worldwide.

KTEK was very much interested in music even at a young age. It can be said that he began his music career when his mother bought him a Sony tape player. Using its recording capabilities, he produced custom-made mixtapes that he sold to his friends. His tapes became so popular that he got invited to DJ at local parties. Later on, he trained in a recording studio by his mentor, Fu, who nicknamed him, TEK. He was given that nickname after he brought back to life a broken computer just sitting there is a corner of the studio. Since then, his interests were focused on music, computers, and software.

KTEK, the Hip Hop producer in Atlanta, points out that his key sources of inspiration are from legendary artists like Michael Jackson, Sting, The Art of Noise, Seal, Timbaland, Phil Collins, J-Dilla, Bass 305, Dr. Dre, DJ Magic Mike, Eric B and Rakim, and Tekmaster P.E.B. He likes to combine non-traditional sounds and recording techniques mixed with elements of orchestral, human sound, and electronic pads and keys, to produce a unique sound.

CT Aletniq points out that it is vital for music artists to hire a music producer when recording their album, demo, or mixtape to ensure that the produced music will sound better and they would also be able to benefit from the lower cost of producing the music recording. The reason for this is that an experienced and skilled music producer can actually help in minimizing the time needed to be spent in the recording studio. The music producer has sufficient experience to ensure that all musicians who will be involved in the recording have all been appropriately rehearsed and are ready to play their instruments in a professional recording studio.

The truly experienced producer will have his sights focused on the kind of sound that the music artist wants to create and make sure that all of the musicians and other parties will be adhering to the deadlines. It is common to have deadlines when a music artist is creating music in a recording studio. Fortunately, with the right music producer, recording a demo, album, or rap mixtape may actually be an easy undertaking.

People in the music industry may want to download instrumentals directly from the website of Phoenix Recording. Music artists may also want to go to the site?s Beats page and listen to a number of Hip Hop beats that are available for sale. They have Pop and Hip Hop producers coming up with such beats every day, so music artists may want to visit the Beats page on a regular basis.
